Airlift Hauls 2d Best Load As Blockade Nears End

Russians Restore Electricity to West Sector and Offer To End Press War

From Wire Dispatches

Berlin, May 10.—Despite preparations on both sides for lifting the blockade at 12:01 a. m. Thursday, the Allied airlift today brought in its second biggest load.

In the 24 hours ended at noon, 9157 tons of supplies came into Berlin on 1019 flights.

The operation was marred by the crash of a British plane, which injured the crew of four.

There was almost a carnival feeling among Berliners in anticipation of a return to normal after the 11-month blockade.

Red Power for West Berlin

Russian-sector electric plants this morning provided power to the western part of the city for two hours. The two million or more inhabitants of west Berlin have been on a household ration of four hours of electricity a day.

Soviet officials also offered to call off the East-West newspaper war. The Russians have barred from their zone German-language publications issued in areas under control of the Western Allies, and the Allies have banned such publications issued in the Soviet zone.

Blockade Derby Forming

The United States, Britain and France today formally ordered city authorities to lift Allied counter-blockade restrictions at one minute past midnight Thursday morning. Vassily Chuikov, the Soviet commander, had issued orders 24 hours earlier to lift the blockade, and all was set for resumption of railroad, highway and water traffic to the western occupation zones.

First German passenger train from Berlin is booked to its capacity of 600 passengers, with some 3000 others offering premiums for space and the privilege of taking part in the occasion.

A "blockade derby" is in the making along the autobahn from Helmstedt, in the British zone. German companies are offering substantial prizes for the first vehicles in various categories to arrive. There are prizes for the first coal burner, the first Diesel truck and the first bus.

British officials are worried about broken bones in the projected dash by news correspondents from Helmstedt to Berlin. They talked about corralling the correspondents into convoys.

Approximately 250 newspapermen, magazine writers and radio reporters are expected to augment the usual Berlin complement.

Sheriff, Deputies Indicted in Ga. Negro Beating

Trenton, Ga., May 10 (AP).—Sheriff J. W. Lynch, three deputies and a private citizen were indicted tonight on charges of assault in the flogging of seven Negroes by hooded men reported to be members of the Ku Klux Klan.

The Dade County grand jury returned the indictments after the seven Negroes came here from Chattanooga, Tenn., today to testify.

The officers were charged with assault and battery and failure to suppress mob violence.

The floggings took place on the night of April 2. Sheriff Lynch had arrested the seven Negroes at a house where he said "wild parties" had been reported.

He said a group of about 40 masked and robed men appeared and demanded the surrender of the Negroes. He identified the men as Klansmen. The victims said later they were loaded into a station wagon, driven to a wooded spot, flogged and told to "clear out."

Sen. Douglas Hits Tax Rise, Urges Thrift

By The Associated Press

Opposition to President Truman's proposed tax increase mounted in Congress yesterday with Senator Douglas (D.-Ill.), usually rated a liberal, calling for a curb on "waste of money and personnel."

"To be a liberal one does not have to be a wastrel," the freshman senator told his colleagues. "We must in fact be thrifty if we are to be really humane."

Douglas spoke shortly after official reports told of a $2,900,000,000 drop in consumer income the first three months of 1949.

Conditions have changed "for the worse" since President Truman drafted his budget, Douglas said.

"I submit," he added, "it would be very foolish for us to act on the basis of conditions five or six months ago. Under present conditions, with business declining, it would seem to me to be extremely unwise to increase taxes further.

Would Fry Out Bureau Fat

"Our first job is to fry the extra fat out of our departments and agencies."

He proposed that the Government replace only half its job vacancies and drop the "drones."

The decline in consumers' income, a prime source of Federal revenue, was most severe in March, the Commerce Department reported, when personal incomes fell $2,000,000,000 below the previous month.

The March slump brought the first quarter's income rate down to a total of $216,700,000,000, figured on an annual basis, as compared with $219,600,000,000 for the last three months of 1948.

The department attributed most of the decline to new shrinkages in wages and salaries as a result of lay-offs and shortened work hours in manufacturing plants. For example, it said farm income in March dropped only 500 million dollars below the previous month, but nonagricultural workers received $1,500,000,000 less, figured on an annual rate basis.

The report brought into sharp forcus the mounting dispute over what steps the Government should take to meet the twin problems of slackening business activity and unemployment.

On this score, Senator Martin (R., Pa.) told his colleagues yesterday that unless Congress acts quickly to slash President Truman's spending proposals this country "may face bankruptcy."

The time has come, he said,

Hague's Grip On Jersey City Finally Broken

Jersey City, N. J., May 10 (AP).—"Boss" Frank Hague's iron grip on the political destinies of this Democratic strong-hold was broken today.

His city commission ticket lost for the first time in three decades. The commission, elected for four years, selects one of their number to be mayor.

Hague's reign came to an end at the hands of a Fusion group, whose five-man ticket swept into office in today's election.

Ticket Headed by Nephew

The 73-year-old Hague himself was not a candidate. His ticket was headed by his nephew, Frank Hague Eggers, who became mayor two years ago when Hague stepped down after 30 years in office.

The Eggers-Hague ticket was licked by one headed by John V. Kenny, once one of Hague's trusted lieutenants who broke with him.

Complete unofficial returns gave Kenny, a wealthy contractor, 81,117 votes. He was high man. Lowest man on the Fusion "Freedom for All" ticket was James F. Murray, jr., with 73,448 votes.

The Hague forces were led by Philip McGovern who received 59,358 ballots. Eggers was second on his ticket and seventh in the balloting with 59,358 votes.

Hague's forces conceded defeat shortly after 10 p. m. (EDT), an hour after the polls closed. Eggers issued a statement saying:

"It is the will of the people and we will abide by their decision."

A record high vote of 143,541 ballots was cast.

17 Children in 17 Years, Mother, 33, Has Triplets

Asheville, N. C., May 10 (U.P.).—A 33-year-old mother who has had 17 children in 17 years of married life, stunned her husband today by presenting him with triplets. Mrs. Jack Norris had the triplets in her downtown four-room house here. Only her husband and later a neighbor were present when the first baby was born but a doctor arrived within minutes.

The triplets, named David, Daniel and Donald, averaged three pounds each. They were reported in good condition.

Sales Tax Foes Won't Resort To Filibuster

Senate foes of the 2 per cent District sales tax bill generally turned thumbs down yesterday on the idea of joining a drive to talk the measure to death.

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), who held the floor for 4½ hours Monday to speak against the sales levy, served notice that he would continue to do all he could to beat the plan.

He said he may speak further at length on proposed substitutes for the sales tax. The Senate is slated to resume debate on the 18-million-dollar city revenue measure today. The measure was displaced yesterday for debate on the Treasury-Postoffice money bill.

Work on the District bill will resume after Senate action, expected today, on the Treasury-Postoffice bill.

McGrath Predicts Passage

Senate District Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) voiced renewed confidence that the sales tax plan would be brought to a final vote and passed this week.

Among known Senate opponents of the sales tax, there appeared no disposition to join Senator Johnston in an all-out talkfest against the bill.

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) said he will speak against the sales levy but "I can't make a speech more than 20 minutes long. I run dry."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg) said he planned to speak against the sales tax for half an hour. Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said he would speak about an hour against the sales tax. Senators Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said they may make brief speeches. Senators J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.), Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.), William Langer

Near-Record Wheat Crop Is Forecast

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This year's winter wheat crop will be the second largest in history—well over a billion bushels—the Agriculture Department's Crop Reporting Board predicted yesterday.

Government wheat experts, who less than 18 months ago were urging Americans to "eat less bread" to save wheat to help starving Europe, frankly predicted the upcoming harvest will tax the Nation's storage ability. It also will put the greatest strain on the Government's price support program that protect-the-farmer formula has ever undergone.

Yesterday's prediction was for 1021 million bushels of winter wheat. Little can happen now, except extremely unusual weather, widespread hail storms or similar catastrophes, to cut down the crop. Harvesting will begin in the next 10 days to two weeks in the Southwest, and move rapidly north. Most wheat is far ahead of recent years.

Near Record Goal

The all-time record winter wheat crop was 1068 million bushels two years ago—only 47 million more than forecast for this year. This may be made up by the spring wheat crop.

The first official estimate of spring wheat production will be released on June 10. "Average yields on the prospective spring wheat acreage," the Crop Board said yesterday, "would bring the total wheat crop to 1312 million bushels." The total wheat crop in 1947 was 1367 million bushels.

More acres were planted in winter wheat this year than ever before. A total of 55,656,000 was reported yesterday, compared with 52,859,000 last year, and 54,835,000 in 1947.

The board predicts an average yield of 18.4 bushels to the acre, compared with 18.7 last year and 19.5 in 1947. The average for the 10 preceding years, 1937-46, was 16.6 bushels.

Small Winter Rye Crop

On the other hand winter rye production promises to be the smallest in 75 years, excepting 1946. Yesterday's estimate was only 21,552,000 bushels against 26,388,000 last year and a five-year average of 35,109,000.

Fall-sown oats in 10 Southern States were reported far better than last year. May 1 condition was 81 percent: a year ago it was only 63 percent, and the average is 72 percent. The report stated that the crop "is above both last year and the average."

This year's apple crop was forecast as "average-sized."

"In the Appalachian area, April freezes, in many cases at time of full bloom, caused scattered damage to many Virginia and West Virginia orchards," the report says. "However, in most cases enough bloom escaped injury so that about an average crop seems likely for these States. Some varieties, particularly Red Delicious, were more severely damaged than others. The bloom was rather light in York orchards which bore a heavy crop last year.

"In Maryland, frost damage was light except for some low-lying orchards in the western part of

For Representative Crew

Airlift Tour Over Whole U. S. Planned by Defense Officials

Nation-wide celebration of the triumph of the Allied airlift, with representative airlift personnel participating in parades and ceremonies in Washington and 20 other American cities, is being planned by the National Military Establishment.

Preparations are under way for a country-wide tour by an airlift party including officers and men from all services participating in the airlift. Representatives of the American, British and French military forces are to be included in the touring party. A man from each branch of service will be included, to receive the country's honors for his comrades. A typical party would include an Air Force pilot, an Air Force ground crew man, a Navy pilot, a Navy Ground Control Approach operator, an Army Transportation officer, a Transportation Corps driver, a Marine pilot, two British and two French airlift veterans.

If Congress acts in time, the first presentation of the special congressional awards for airlift participants may be a feature of the program.

The purpose of the celebration would be to bring home to the American public a demonstration of the country's military and civilian solidarity, the peace contribution made by the airlift, the cooperation of services and branches of service symbolizing unification in action, the importance of preparedness.

The members of the airlift party will be given official receptions, appear at community rallies and describe to the American public how they helped run "Operation Vittles." Key national defense officials, including the Secretary of Defense and heads of the separate services, will participate in the celebrations.

The whole program still is in a formative state, but preliminary suggestions call for a tour in one of the C54s used on the airlift, probably a plane with a record number of missions.

The number of cities scheduled for visits may have to be changed as requests for appearances flood in, but it is hoped, for reasons of economy and conservation of manpower and equipment, to keep the tour limited to 21 cities.

Those already suggested include Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Denver, Omaha, Boston, Atlanta, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Birmingham, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Kansas City, Houston, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Des Moines and Washington.

The idea of some kind of Nation-wide recognition of the great service of the airlift personnel seems to have had a spontaneous generation. Persons outside the Military

2 Conferees On Germany Go Thursday

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup and State Department Counselor Charles E. Bohlen will leave here Thursday for Paris, for preliminary talks with the British and French on the May 23 conference of Foreign Ministers.

Jessup, who negotiated for the lifting of the Berlin blockade and the forthcoming four-power meeting on German problems, will be chief alternate for Secretary of State Dean Acheson at the Paris conference, the State Department said yesterday.

Secretary Acheson, accompanied by ranking German experts in the department and technical assistants, will go to Paris by plane late next week, probably Friday or Saturday.

Robert D. Murphy, former political advisor to Gen. Lucius D. Clay in Germany, and acting director of the State Department's Office of German-Austrian Affairs, will serve as Deputy United States Member for Germany on the delegation, while John Foster Dulles will head Acheson's panel of advisers.

Dulles, who was foreign policy adviser to Governor Thomas E. Dewey during his Presidential campaign, is a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations, and has attended previous meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers in London and Moscow.

Should Secretary Acheson have to return to the United States if the conference drags on, which is highly likely, Jessup will be chief representative for this country against a familiar opponent—Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Russian Foreign Minister.

Splitup of U. S. By Races Held Russian Aim

By The Associated Press

A former Polish general testified yesterday that Moscow-directed agents expected to "break up the United States" into a series of small separate nations of Negroes, Germans and other racial entities.

Gen. Izydor Rudolf Modelski, former military attache at the Polish embassy here, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee he received word of the plot from an alleged master Soviet spy named Col. Gustaw Alef-Bokolwiak.

The witness said Colonel Alef posed as his deputy on the Polish Embassy staff but in reality was "one of the most important Communists and an agent of the NKVD, which is the Russian secret police."

Modelski said Colonel Alef told him:

"It is a fairly easy job to undermine United States production. There will be a revolution. They expect to break up the United States into small groups. They will have a Negro nation, a Yugo nation, a German nation, and so forth."

Modelski said he was told in 1947 "by Soviet Admiral Glinkolo" that the Russians would decide "when war should come with the United States."

The witness also testified:

1. That the Polish Embassy was "the center of a spying apparatus and subversive activities directed against the United States."

2. That he had been told the wife of the present Polish Ambassador, Jozef Winiewicz, "is a member of the NKVD."

3. That Dr. Ignacy Zlotowski, a Polish representative to the United Nations, was sent to this country "to do espionage in the atomic bomb field."

Failure Report Discounted

'Remarkable' European Gains Pictured in 1948 U. N. Survey

The United Nations Economic Survey of Europe in 1948, released in Geneva last week, does not blame the European Recovery Program for hurting more than helping Europe's economy.

Text of the document, available in Washington for the first time yesterday, does not support an Associated Press dispatch from Geneva on May 6. The AP correspondent said the Commission had found "the European Recovery Program is hurting Europe's economy more than it helps."

The complete report, now being carefully studied by Government officials in Washington, related "remarkable" progress on the continent but pointed out continuing weaknesses and dangers in Europe's economic position.

The 300-page report and 118 pages of printed tables were prepared by the secretariat of the U.N. Economic Commission for Europe, which has its headquarters in Geneva. Since the commission includes Marshall Plan countries and those of the Soviet bloc, the report dealt with the 1948 achievements and the future prospects of both eastern and western Europe.

Cheerful facts and sombre forecasts alternated in the introduction by Gunnar Myrdal, the Swedish economist who is executive secretary of the commission.

"Although economic conditions of life have become more normal," Myrdal wrote, "the underlying problems of the European economy do not appear to be appreciably nearer solution. The progress of the past year would in many areas have been impossible without temporary outside financial assistance.

"It was, moreover, achieved in the face of increasing political tension which, although its economic consequences have not been fully felt so far, is bound to retard future progress if the division of Europe is further intensified."

The same alternation of light and shade was evident throughout the report. As to Europe's actual achievements in 1948, the report was one of the most encouraging surveys to appear since the war.

By the end of 1948, according to the report, Europe's industrial production had risen slightly above the level of 1947. Industrial output in the whole of Europe, excluding the Soviet Union, was 16 per cent greater than in the previous year; productivity per worker was up 9 per cent; farm production was up 12 per cent, although not yet reaching prewar levels.

European shipping, to take an example of 1948 progress, showed net receipts of 300 million dollars as against a net deficit of 400 million in 1947. In general, the headway made in eastern Europe was as fast as in the west; in the Soviet Union, industrial output in 1948 was reported 18 per cent above the 1940 level, and the grain harvest surpassed prewar figures for the first time.

"The improvement in exports was even greater than in produc-

Barkley Suggests 'Veep' as Name

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—What does one call the Vice President of the United States?

The man who ought to know—Vice President Alben W. Barkley—suggested the word tonight.

It is "veep."

"That's what my children call me, anyway," Barkley said on a radio broadcast. "That's not a bad name, is it?"

A commentator wanted to know, however, whether the proper address should be Mr. President or Mr. Vice President.

Barkley said he had been called both since he also is president of the Senate and that others still referred to him as Mr. Senator.

"Of course, some of them call me a lot of other things," Barkley mused.

Recreation Board Terminates Segregation at 2 Playgrounds

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The District Recreation Board yesterday voted unanimously to throw open two playgrounds to nonsegregated use this summer on a trial basis.

At the same time the board put off until next month action on Chairman Harry S. Wender's recommendation that school buildings and recreation board auditoriums be opened to after-school meetings without racial restrictions.

The two playgrounds will be operated by the board in conjunction with the Friends Meeting of Washington (Quakers) which will provide 10 or 12 volunteer workers and a paid director for each.

The playgrounds are:

1. Rose Park in Georgetown, now a Negro playground in a mixed neighborhood.

2. Combined east and west Garfield Park in southeast Washington. The east section now is a Negro area and the west section white. They will be operated as one playground.

The interracial experiment will be operated from June 16 to September 1, including an initial week of training for the staffs. The present Recreation Board staffs at the playgrounds will be moved elsewhere and staff members new to the neighborhoods will be assigned to work with the Friends.

Irving C. Root, Interior Department representative on the board, indicated his department may move to take over operation of three

Figures Broken Down

Rich Eat Cake, Poor Eat Bread, Survey Begun in 1947 Finds

Washington's high income families spend four times as much on cake and cookies as low-income families, but only twice as much for bread.

When it came to bread and rolls, Washingtonians earning $1000 to $2000 a year, spent 76 cents a week, as against 22 cents for cake and cookies. Families in the $7500 to $10,000 a year bracket spent $1.35 for bread and 86 cents a week for sweets.

This District consumer pattern was uncovered as part of study begun in June, 1947, by the Department of Labor, Secretary of Labor Tobin disclosed yesterday.

The survey, which covered 34 American cities, also showed the following eating habits of Washington residents:

The family having a net income of $1000 to $2000 spent (in the spring of 1948) 76 cents per week for eggs, the family with $3000 to $4000 income spent $1.20, the family with $7500 to $10,000 spent $1.72.

The three income group families spent, respectively, 95 cents, $2.02 and $2.19 a week for milk.

For fresh fruits, the corresponding expenditures were 38 cents, 79 cents and $1.61 a week.

And when it came to meat, the family outlay ran, by income groups, $2.84, $5.10, and $8.86 a week.

In 1947, the survey found, among Washington families with incomes from $1000 to $2000 the average annual expenditure for food at home was $621 per family; at the $3000 to $4000 income level, the average outlay for food at home was $978; at the $7500 to $10,000 income level, the annual average outlay was $1,479 for food.

Eagle Scout In Roanoke Is Accused Of Murder

Youth Never Missed Sunday School Class In Last Two Years, Detectives Report

Roanoke, Va., May 10. (U.P.).—Lee Scott, 16, a choir boy and high school wrestler, was charged tonight with the brutal murder of pretty 16-year-old Dana Marie Weaver in a parish house.

The bespectacled youth, an Eagle Scout who hadn't missed a Sunday school class in the last two years, confessed after five hours of questioning, police said.

Detective Capt. Frank Webb, who had been working on the case almost continuously since the girl's battered body was found yesterday in the parish house of Christ Episcopal Church, announced the confession and the murder charge.

Text of Confession Withheld

He refused to disclose the text of the confession tonight and the motive for the slaying was not immediately known.

"There are many things we just cannot disclose at the present time," he said.

Deep scratches on Scott's face prompted police to arest him this afternoon. They also had learned that he attended Christ Church and was a member of the church's Young People's Service League, to which Dana Marie was going Sunday night when she disappeared.

Her choked and beaten body was found in the kitchen of the parish house where the league usually held its Sunday night meetings. But it met last Sunday in a nearby town.

Scott, who police said apparently never had dated the girl, was placed in jail on the top floor of the municipal building, instead of being turned over to juvenile authorities.

Directed to Clothing, Police Say

[The Associated Press quoted police as saying the youth told them where to find a paper sack containing a coffee bag which was missing from the church kitchen, and also directed them to clothing he assertedly wore on Sunday.

[Officers, the Associated Press said, went to the boy's home where they obtained a pair of saddle oxfords, a corduroy coat, shirt and trousers.

[These articles, officers said bore stains believed to be blood.

[The white and tan oxfords, they said, bore evidence of having been washed partially, but stains were found on the sides near the sole, and on the white laces.

[The paper sack, showing evidence of having been exposed to the rains of Monday and Tuesday, was found in an alley. Police said the bag also contained a broken soft drink bottle.]

Police described him as calm. A friend, who walked to school with

Attack on Outpost Of Iran Charged To Soviet Army

Tehran, Iran, May 10 (AP).—A military informant said today about a regiment of Soviet troops, supported by tanks and armored cars, attacked and occupied three Iranian outposts in the Azerbaijan area Sunday.

The informant reported one Iranian missing and several wounded. There was no information available on Soviet casualties.

The informant added that the Iranian army commander has protested to the Russians and that discussions are in progress on the spot.

The informant said the Russians first attacked Saturday with a number of troops and fired on an Iranian outpost at Buzarjomehri. The Iranian garrison returned the fire and the Russians withdrew, waiting until the next day to attack again.

This is the latest in a series of reports of Soviet-Iranian border incidents. Recently Gurgan, an Iranian town on the Caspian Sea in northeast Iran, was reported to be the scene of an incident in which an Iranian was killed and two others captured.

Cannon Asks Action On Stopgap Pay Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) yesterday strongly urged presidential signature of a stopgap resolution lifting the threat of payless paydays for thousands of Government employes.

The resolution, pushed through Congress when a conference deadlock developed over the first deficiency bill carrying pay for employes in a number of agencies, meanwhile laid over another day at the White House.

Whether the President will sign it into law could not be learned, but it was known that the old Straus-Boke rider, written into the resolution to speed passage, and still holding up an agreement on the deficiency bill, is distasteful to him.

'Preserves Status Quo'

While the Straus-Boke rider was added to insure Senate clearance, Cannon said it "simply preserves the status quo until conferees reach an agreement on that point, without influencing the decision in any way."

Congressional inquiries at the White House developed that the resolution hadn't yet reached the President's desk.

The Straus-Boke rider, still the nub of the pay hold-up, was originally tied to the Interior Department appropriation bill by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress.

"Fired" Them in Effect

By requiring a minimum of five years engineering and administrative experience to hold their office, it in effect "fired" Commissioner of Reclamation Michael W. Straus and Richard L. Boke, Regional Director of Reclamation for California.

Meanwhile employes of the office of Defense Transportation have gone two months without pay, employes in the office of the Housing Expediter have resorted to a private bank loan to tide them over, and the pay threat hangs over several other agencies.

The Commerce Department has arranged a $50,000 loan from its credit union to provide funds for Export Control employes.

The Office of the Housing Expediter is trying to arrange bank loans to pay its field employes who haven't been paid for more than a month. Commodity Credit hopes to have a fund ready to lend money to its hard-pressed employes.

The Federal Security Agency may try to get a rider onto another bill which would allow it to pay compensation to the 9000 distressed people who were injured on the job, and the families of employes who were killed in line of duty. Federal Housing has a payless payday coming up Friday for its 4500 employes unless something happens—and quick.

Democrats Sad

Truman Slap At Byrd Gives Joy to GOP

Congressional Republicans yesterday gleefully made the most of a presidential slap at Senator Byrd (D., Va.) but Southern Democrats didn't crack a smile.

House GOP Whip Leslie Arends (Ill.) said the President's reported comment that there are too many Byrds in Congress is a "jump from patronage to purge."

"He can't purge the Virginia Senator Until 1953 and he can't purge if he isn't around, so it looks to me like he is getting set for the race in 1952," Arends told the House.

"And it may be, Mr. Speaker, that the patronage-to-purge maneuver will turn out to be quite a hurdle and the warbles from the mocking birds—B I R D S—in Congress won't be sweet to his ears."

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) criticized Mr. Truman's remark.

"We need the Harry Byrd kind of men in the Senate. If the fiscal policy of the President is not halted, it will lead to printing press money or to wartime taxes, one or the other," Wherry said.

One of the Southerners, Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) disagreed with the President and observed darkly: "If we don't have some economy in Government, we're going to be headed for financial bankruptcy."

for the lawmakers to "put aside our pet projects" and to trim military and foreign-aid outlays "to give us an opportunity to keep America solvent."

Martin spoke out after a number of Democrats and Republicans alike threw their support behind a reported recommendation by Mr. Truman's Council of Economic Advisers for a curb on Government spending. The council, in its latest report on the state of the Nation's economic health, was said to have taken the stand it would be safer to hold down expenditures than to try any sharp boost in taxes.

Along this line, Senator George (D., Ga.) chairman of the Tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, told a newsman:

"If the national income is shrinking because business is shrinking, it would be nonsense to clap more taxes on a falling economy."

"Our only hope," George said, "is to cut expenditures."

Commenting on the Economic Council's report—which has not been made public—national Democratic chairman J. Howard McGrath pointedly said:

"I'm the kind who thinks that when you hire a doctor you ought to pay pretty close attention to his advice."

Representative Martin (R., Mass.), Republican leader in the House, meanwhile called on the President ot make the report public.

"Is this report being withheld from the people," he asked, "simply because it recommends tax reduction along the lines of our Republican policy in both the 80th and 81st Congresses?"

"We are fighting deflation, not inflation," Martin said, adding that "lower taxes and more jobs for the people should be our present objective."

City Employes Urged to Turn Out To Greet Dutra

District Commissioners yesterday authorized all District government personnel who could be spared to leave work early on May 18 in order to participate in the welcome for Brazilian President Dutra.

The official will receive a formal welcome to the city at a brief ceremony in front of the District Building about 4:30 p. m. following a motorcade tour from National Airport.

The arrangements committee has also asked the Federal government to release workers early for the program.

House Unit Liberalizes Pension Law

By the United Press

The House Veterans Committee yesterday dropped plans to write a new veterans' pension law but tentatively voted to bring more needy, aged ex-servicemen under present pension provisions.

The committee accepted by voice vote a new compromise by Chairman John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) which would cost an estimated $12,000,000,000 during the next 50 years.

The action, subject to a final vote today, merely liberalizes existing laws to make more veterans of both wars eligible for $60 monthly pensions up to the age of 65 and $72 a month when they reach 65. Communists would not be eligible.

Here is how the new plan would work:

Present Veterans Administration rules allow $60 monthly pensions to veterans under the age of 65, provided they are disabled and earning less than $1000 a year in the case of single men, $2500 for those with dependents. The amount of disability ranges from 60 to 70 per cent under 55 years of age to 50 per cent at age 60.

At age 65, the pension goes up to $72 and the disability requirement is cut to 10 per cent. Veterans must be held "unemployable" to qualify for the pensions at any age.

The committee bill raises the income limitation for single men at any age to $1200. It does not change the limit for those with dependents. That is the only change for men under 65.

But for veterans 65 and older, it removes completely the requirements of disability and unemployability. The only remaining test would be that of annual income, with the upper limits set at $1200 for single men and $2500 for those with dependents.

The new income levels also would apply to veterans' widows or orphans who are entitled to pensions.

Another provision would raise pension checks to $100 if the veteran is so badly disabled that he requires a full-time attendant.

Herzog Hears Bible Quoted By President

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Dr. Isaac Herzog, chief rabbi of Israel, called on President Truman yesterday. He recited a Psalm, and Mr. Truman came right back with a passage from Isaiah.

"He knows his Bible," the visitor from Israel told reporters later.

Dr. Herzog, who used to be chief rabbi of Ireland, with a flock of 10,000, is a short, jolly man with a gray beard. On his visit to the White House, he was wearing a silk topper, an old-fashioned formal topcoat and a silver-headed cane.

He said he wanted to convey to Mr. Truman the gratitude of Jews the world over for what he had "done for us in Israel." He also wanted the President to express to Jews in the United States Israel's appreciation for what they done for the United Jewish Appeal.

Dr. Herzog said that he and Mr. Truman talked thereafter about religious matters.

Had the President impressed him as a religious man? a reporter asked.

"Absolutely," said Dr. Herzog. "It was like two sparks meeting."

Dr. Herzog told how he recited to Mr. Truman Psalm 126, which tells of the laughter and singing that was heard when the Lord ended the capitivity of Zion, and which includes the line: "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."

The President, the rabbi said, reached for his own Bible and said he would read a parallel passage. He thumbed the pages until he came to Isaiah, and then read:

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Dr. Herzog, talking to reporters about his days in Ireland, told of a conference he once had with De Valera. He said they were going over the things the Irish and Jews had in common, and he told the Irish leader of one thing they had overlooked:

"The Jews can't understand the Jewish language, and the Irish can't understand the Irish language (Gaelic)."

Concessions Held Needed On Labor Bill

The Administration must make concessions to win repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act in the Senate, an Administration leader admitted yesterday.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, felt the Administration might be willing to accept a number of provisions now missing from the Thomas bill and still carry out the Democratic Party's pledge to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Thomas bill would cancel out Taft-Hartley and restore the Wagner Act with certain "improvements" suggested by President Truman. An identical measure, the Lesinski bill, was stopped short by a GOP-Dixie Democrat coalition in the House, where the Administration leaders are in the process of writing a new bill for a second try at repeal.

The Thomas bill was steamrollered some weeks ago through the Senate Labor Committee by a straight party vote, 8 to 5. Since then, three members of the minority, led by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), have came up with a string of amendments which would "ease up" the Taft-Hartley Act but retain its basic philosophy and provisions.

Subcommittee to Study Outlook

Senator Thomas told a press conference yesterday that he was picking a subcommittee to consider the situation. As for himself, Thomas said, he felt that the Administration didn't have to battle to the bitter end on such issues as the unionization of foremen, the anti-Communist affidavit and returning the Mediation Service to the Labor Department.

He would be adamant, Thomas said, on the matter of injunctions. He added that perhaps injunctions might be necessary to deal with national emergency strikes.

The Senate Labor Committee chairman also remarked that he personally was for increasing the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour, and that other amendments to the wage-hour law ought to be taken up in separate legislation.

A Senate Labor subcommittee has yet to report out its recommendations on the wage-hour amendments proposed by the Administration.

Labor Proposals Incorporated

The House Labor Committee incorporated most of the Labor Department's proposals in the bill it reported out. But in view of the strength of the GOP-Dixie Democrat coalition, several Administration leaders on the Hill are seeking to recall the committee's bill and concentrate their efforts on raising the wage floor to 75 cents.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin yesterday continued plumping for extension and broadening of the wage-hour act.

'Exploratory' Ford Strike Talks Adjourn

Detroit, May 10 (AP).—First peace talks since the start of the six-day Ford strike broke up today with no settlement in sight.

Another session was scheduled for Wednesday at 10 a. m.

As the talks went on, more Ford plants across the Nation prepared to lay off 14,000 workers and shut down at the end of the day's operations.

The strike of 65,000 workers hit Ford's Rouge and Lincoln-Mercury plants Thursday.

President Walter Reuther of the CIO United Auto Workers said the company asked for the recess "to discuss its position."

There was no comment from Ford officials.

Reuther said the union had not changed its stand on the "speed-up" issue "because our original position was basically correct."

He refused to say whether any progress was made at what he called "an exploratory session" today.

Officials of the Ford Motor Co. have estimated that nearly all of its 106,000 production workers in 49 plants will be affected by next Monday if the strike continues.

Argentine Plan To Boost U. S. Exports Bared

By the United Press

Argentine Ambassador Jeronimo Remorino announced yesterday that his country has worked out a sweeping program to increase its exports to the United States by allowing virtually free trade between Argentine exporters and United States importers.

Remorino, who has just returned from a month-long visit to Buenos Aires, said that 20 per cent of the United States dollars which are earned through the new export program will be set aside to pay off overdue accounts owned in the United States, totaling approximately $200 million.

He said United States firms operating in Argentina will be able to draw their back earnings under the plan.

Remorina said that under the new plan, the Argentine government's trade institute will exercise only general "protective" control over foreign trade, with actual negotiations for exports handled directly between United States buyers and Argentine producers. Previously the institute has acted as sales agent for exports and purchasing agent for imports.

"We can greatly improve our exports to the United States," the ambassador said. "It is necessary for us to do so to enable us to obtain dollar exchange so that we can import United States products —farm machinery, chemicals and so forth."

SPEAKING OF Furniture
By CARY SCATES

Importance of Quality Construction

In selecting the correct pieces of furniture for a properly decorated home, one must take into consideration, the quality of the construction of the pieces they choose.

Having never been in the position to actually see the construction of any quality furniture, I devoted sufficient time to convince myself that all of our claims were well founded. After witnessing the actual construction and finishing of furniture in a number of factories, I cannot over-emphasize the importance of QUALITY CONSTRUCTION. I was quite amazed when I got the over-all picture.

One of the first essentials is the choice and preparation of good lumber and materials. In this line, as in all of the other steps in this process, you will find seasoned veterans who have years of experience in their specialized jobs.

Further on down the line, you have cabinet makers, carvers, and sanders. These men cut out the pieces, make inlays and molding, men who carve various period designs in the arms and legs, and who do the actual putting together of the furniture. These men take out the flaws that you and I can't see. Flaws that are detectable only by them. Here these men put two dowels where one would do, take a double check to see that each piece is properly glued, and who make doubly sure that each piece will stand up to the name that we here at Malcolm Scates give it, "Furniture for the Years."

This same exactness is followed in the manufacture of upholstered pieces, in fact, every piece of furniture you will find at Malcolm Scates.

Quality Construction means economy, for it is a lifetime investment. Without this construction your home decorations and furniture are only a shell. Be sure, with "Furniture for the Years."

We will enjoy discussing your furnishings and decorating problems with you. Drop in to . . .

U. S. Wants Reich United, Clay Says

France Objects

Interim Rule For Germans Faces Veto

Bonn, Germany, May 10 (AP)—France will formally veto Germany's "temporary cabinet" when the west German draft constitution is discussed by the Allied military governors later this week, it was announced today.

The French liaison officer here told German leaders that Gen. Pierre Koenig, the French military governor, would reject as "unlawful" the executive committee set up four days ago to run western Germany until a constitutional government is chosen.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the U. S. military governor, said in Frankfurt that if Koenig objects, the 18-man committee created by the west German constitutional convention will be disbanded.

At the same time, the draft constitution was attacked by Paul Loebe, a former president of Germany's ill-fated Weimar Republic and one of the architects of the new charter.

Loebe, a veteran Social Democratic leader, accused the military governors and the heavily Catholic Christian Democrats of ramming through a "weak-nation" constitution which he said would never be acceptable to Germany's Protestant majority.

The liaison officer said Koenig's objection to the temporary government was based on last year's six-power London pact on Germany, which provided that the ministers-president of the 11 West-zone states should act as an interim government after the adoption of the constitution.

The London agreement provided that the convention should be dissolved as soon as a constitution had been approved by the Allies.

Clay said he had no objection to the "executive committee," but that he would not back it against a French protest.

Berlin, May 10 (AP)—Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today Americans want to see Germany united, provided all sections have "the same guarantees of freedom as contained in the Bonn constitution."

Clay, who is retiring five days hence from the position of U. S. military governor, spoke at a farewell ceremony in the German Bizonal Economic Council at Frankfurt.

A constitution containing an elaborate bill of rights was adopted for the western zones of Germany by a German parliamentary convention at Bonn Sunday.

Clay's remark paralleled a statement last week by the British military governor, Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, that the West was determined not to bargain away fundamental democratic rights at the four-power Foreign Ministers' Conference opening in Paris May 23.

"The solution of the whole German problem," Robertson said, "depends more on freedom of elections, of the press, speech and radio than anything else."

The Bonn constitution excludes the Soviet zone for the present.

Clay told the Germans to strive toward three things: to understand liberty, to have the will never to give it up, and to use their liberty properly.

Dr. Erich Koehler, council president, said in reply:

"Tell President Truman that we want a united Germany, but a united Germany in which the eastern zone had the same human rights and the same unhampered political and spiritual liberties which the Allied powers have brought to realization in the west zones. May the Council of Foreign Ministers come to the same decision."

German officials from Hesse presented Clay a German landscape painting. The council plans to bive him a cup, but it is not yet completed.

Bonn Chosen as Capital Of German Republic

Bonn, Germany, May 10 (AP).—The West German Constituent Assembly tonight chose Bonn as the capital of the new German federal republic.

Truman Hears Plan to Raise 'Voice' Funds

A major increase in funds for Voice of America broadcasts overseas—possibly tripling the present outlay—was suggested to President Truman yesterday by Sen. Brien McMahon (D., Conn.).

McMahon said he told the President in a White House visit: "I am one who believes that nothing is more important than telling the people of the world our position and what we are doing."

He said the President listened with interest to the proposal in which McMahon mentioned no figure but declared: "If we triple our appropriations for the Voice of America we could well use it."

Hearings Completed

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), yesterday completed hearings on next year's funds for the State Department's international information and educational activities program which includes the overseas broadcasts.

Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs George V. Allen urged restoration of a two-million-dollar cut made by a House subcommittee in the over-all program request for 36 million dollars for fiscal 1950, declaring:

"We need additional signal strength . . . the Russians are jamming us right up to our shore lines."

The State Department is seeking $8,312,670 for "Voice" outlays next year. For the current year, $7,732,841 has been appropriated for the broadcasts, plus four million dollars in nonrecurring outlays for building improved radio relays overseas.

Because of the cut made by the House committee, Allen said the department had to drop plans for two special antennas, at a cost of $514,000, to increase radio signal strength to Russia. Last Sunday, the Russians succeeded in jamming 88 per cent of British and American short-wave broadcasts.

Wants to Expand "America"

Allen also urged restoration of the cut to provide funds for expanding the magazine America—now sent only to Russia—to other languages.

Articles in this magazine must be first submitted for censorship to the Soviet, and 50,000 copies monthly are then turned over to Russia for sale at the price equivalent of $1.20 a copy.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) protested that this price is far too high to gain a wide readership.

Allen said inasmuch as the Russians limit circulation of "America," the price is justifiable to help repay the investment.

In 1948 the magazine cost $357,905 for publication and the United States collected $290,000 from sales, said Allen, while a return of $552,000 is expected this year on a cost of $554,310.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry said he was "pleasantly surprised" to find one agency on that much of a "self-sustaining basis."

U. S. Ready to Aid Poland Hike Coal Output, Harriman Says

Geneva, Switzerland, May 10 (AP).—W. Averell Harriman, roving ambassador for the European Recovery Program, told the U. N. Economic Commission for Europe today that the United States is ready to help Poland produce more coal for all Europe.

Harriman said remarks of Soviet Delegate A. A. Arutiunian were "uncalled for." Arutiunian had charged that the coal committee of the commission "oriented its task toward America and wants to make Europe dependent on American coal."

The American said ERP funds hads been allocated for purchase of Polish coal by European countries and the "United States has at all times attempted to assist western Europe and Poland expand coal production so that Europe would eventually be self-sufficient."

Earlier, Arutiunian charged the United States with damming up the flow of East-West trade by clamping an export licensing system on western Europe. He spoke in response to a statement by Harriman yesterday that the Soviet bloc was refusing to resume its traditional prewar exports of agricultural and raw products to western Europe.

The Soviet delegate said exports of eastern countries to western Europe in 1948 amounted to $1,275,000,000, while their imports from western Europe were 930 million dollars.

"This is due to the demands of the United States under the Marshall Plan policy," he declared.

Pact Aims at No 'Maginot', No Vast Army, Senators Say

By The Associated Press

The Atlantic Pact does not mean any "Maginot Line" defense of western Europe, nor does it signify that a vast army will be strung along the borders of that area, Senate foreign policy leaders said yesterday.

Exactly what the United States would do in case of an attack on western Europe was left unsaid by Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

But Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, has made plain that if he had his way, the strategy would be to stop an invasion, rather than let the continent be overrun and then seek to liberate it later.

Warburg Raises Question

There are other ways than Maginot Lines of trying to smash an invasion, of course.

The question of how far the United States is prepared to go in meeting such an invasion was raised at a Senate hearing by James P. Warburg, former New York banker.

He told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he would oppose the North Atlantic Security Treaty, now before the committee, if the United States intends to defend the frontiers of western Europe in event of war.

On the other hand, he said he would favor the mutual aid agreement if this country were only committed to "avenge and liberate, but not necessarily to prevent invasion" of western Europe.

Connally and Vandenberg

Chairman Connally assured him that "the treaty does not contemplate stringing any army along the Rhine, the Oder or the Elbe."

Senator Vandenberg, ranking Republican on the committee, told Warburg:

"If all our treaty friends sit in together and agree on a military program, isn't it reasonable to agree the program does not contemplate any Maginot Line defense?"

Vandenberg said he is not committed to the military aid program which the Administration has bracketed to the pact. He said, however, that the arms program "does not contemplate any substantial increase in troops" but is intended to build up the armament of units already existing in the western European countries.

"If that is true," Warburg commented, "I think we should not let our friends think it is something else."

"Defend" or "Deter"

The witness, who has written extensively on international affairs, said he thinks it should be made plain whether the United States is undertaking to "defend" western Europe from invasion or merely to "deter" invasion. He said it is "folly" to think the French, Belgians and Dutch would fight a delaying action for the benefit of the United States and Britain "if they knew in advance that their countries would be occupied."

Just a week ago, the committee listened to General Bradley testify that "the heart of Europe" is America's primary defense line.

At that time, Bradley said: "Geographically many of these member nations are already in positions where any aggression into western Europe would be a conquest of their homelands. I assure you that our frontiers of collective defense lie in common with theirs in the heart of Europe."

Schwebel Indorses Treaty

Warburg told the committee at the outset that he believes the chief threat from Russia is Communist penetration and subversion rather than military conquest.

Another witness, Stephen M. Schwebel, chairman of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, indorsed the treaty as a step toward peace.

Schwebel suggested, however, that the United States take the lead in developing a defense treaty open to all members of the United Nations. Connally expressed opposition to the idea, and Senator Green (D., R. I.) called it "impractical." Vandenberg, on the other hand, remarked that "if all other resources fail, this is a way in which we could proceed."

Pope Receives Margaret Rose In Private Talk

Vatican City, May 10 (AP).—British Princess Margaret Rose, dressed severely in black, was received by Pope Pius XII in a private audience in his personal library today.

The Princess, who usually doesn't spare the lipstick, used little if any artificial coloring on her lips.

They talked 20 minutes, the 73-year-old Roman Catholic Pontiff and the 18-year-old daughter of Britain's Protestant King George VI. A Vatican communique said the conversation was affable.

Princess Margaret, on vacation in Italy, visited the Pope over the protest of two British Protestant organizaions.

Wearing a black silk dress and veil, she and her party motored through the Vatican City Arch of Bells shortly before 5 p. m.

It was the first meeting between a Pope and British royalty since the Princess' grandparents, King George V and Queen Mary, were received in 1923 by Pope Pius XI.

A crowd of about 1000 waited for an hour for the Princess to emerge from one of the main gates of Vatican City. Shortly before 7 p. m., however, she slipped out of the St. Uffizi Gate, which opens on a side street, and drove off to the British Embassy.

Officials Plan Airlift Tour

Establishment who went to Secretary Johnson and other Defense officials last Saturday, with various proposals for some sort of acknowledgement of the Nation's debt to its airlift veterans, found that planning for such an occasion was well under way. Various departmental chiefs had been asked to prepare proposals, and the first drafts of these plans already had been put into Secretary Johnson's hands. One conference of top Defense chiefs had been held to shape up the proposals and a second preliminary plan had been perfected. Final decisions on the form of the celebration are to be taken this week.

Throughout the preliminary planning, Defense chiefs have had in mind a tribute to the rank-and-file who have made possible the unprecedented achievement of the Berlin airlift.

Planning has aimed at a symbolic gesture of some kind, a celebration in which all the personnel of Operation Vittles could be honored through representative members on an airlift party. The defense chiefs hope to keep the celebrations simple and inexpensive, to utilize a minimum of materiel by committing only one aircraft to the whole tour, to hold the manpower down to a representative group.

The National Military Establishment began its planning as soon as the termination of the fullscale lift became an imminent possibility. It was only a jump ahead of the country. The secretary's office soon had visitors demanding that something be done to allow a grateful country to ackniwledge "the greatest peacetime achievement of American arms." Officials began to get suggestions and requests for appropriate action by mail and by personal visit.

Details of the program in each city will be left to appropriate local officials, working with representatives of the Defense Establishment.

Medal Approved by Committee

A House Armed Services subcommittee yesterday approved unanimously legislation authorizing the award of a special medal for participants in the Berlin airlift.

The bill is expected to be reported by the full committee this week and passed by the House with "appropriate honors to the men of the airlift."

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.)—author of the measure—and Representative Durham (D., N. C.), head of the subcommittee indorsing it, said they would ask House leaders to set aside an hour's debate for special addresses lauding the men of Operations Vittles when it is considered.

The bill would create the "Medal for Humane Action" and permits its award to "persons serving in or with the armed forces of the United States" participating in Vittles.

Deputies Quit Austria Talks

London, May 10 (U.P.).—The Big Four foreign ministers' deputies today adjourned stalemated talks on an Austrian peace treaty after deciding to meet again "not later than June 25."

United States Deputy Samuel Reber suggested Friday that the talks—in progress since February without material result—be adjourned in hopes that their difficulties may be solved at the Big Four meeting beginning in Paris week after next.

British, French and Russian deputies agreed to adjourn after arguing for three hours on procedure.

Right Gaining In British Poll

London, May 10 (AP).—British voters have continued their trend to the right in the first of wee - long elections in England and Wales, returns showed today.

The Conservative Party announced a net gain of 77 seats in incomplete returns from balloting Monday for 352 urban and rural district councils. It said gains included 43 seats won from incumbents of the ruling Labor Party.

Headquarters of the Labor Party said it would make no statement on the voting tonight.

Press Action Taken in U. N.

Lake Success, May 10 (AP).—The United Nations Assembly's Social Committee approved tonight a draft of the first world convention on the international transmission of news and the right of correction.

The committee voted 27 to 4, with 12 abstentions, for a preamble and 23 articles meant to guarantee correspondents against discrimination in seeking news and sending it across national frontiers. Fifteen countries were absent.

Edwin D. Canham, U. S. delegate and editor of the Christian Science Monitor, told reporters the committee's final version was "a ne gain for freedom of information." But he and others of the majority said they voted for it with some reservations.

India, Syria and Egypt, all of whom abstained, gave notice they will fight for changes when the draft comes up for final approval later this week in the General Assembly.

Canham said the draft included a right of correction on a permissive basis. Under this, contracting governments guarantee to deliver corrections demanded by other governments to offending newspapers or agencies, but the newspapers or agencies are not legally bound to circulate them.

The Only Winner: GERMANY

An Editorial
in the Tucson Daily Citizen

Russia's offer to lift the Berlin blockade in exchange for the setting of a date to discuss the total German question and cancellation of our counterblockade is cause for rejoicing—but our joy should not be so unrestrained that we overlook the implications behind the Soviet action.

For instance, the diplomatic stroke which seems to have precipitated the Russian action was the agreement at Bonn among German and Western Allied occupation officials for the establishment of a republic of some 45,000,000 trizonal Germans. Ultimate agreement was reached on this matter when the State Department's adviser on German affairs, Ambassador Robert D. Murphy, flew from Washington to Bonn with a list of concessions without which German Socialists and Christian Democrats refused to write a constitution.

It is obvious that the United States, Britain and France have sacrificed the principles of the Berlin conference of July and August, 1945, as retaliation against the Soviet blockade of the onetime German capital.

Four years ago Messrs. Truman, Attlee and Stalin decided that Germany must have its war potential destroyed, its industry subjected to rigid control and its political and economic structure thoroughly decentralized. The concessions made by the Western Allies in begging German acceptance of the terms for establishing a republic must be considered as denunciating in varying degrees the principles of the Berlin declaration.

Consider the changes that have occurred in German administration over the past four years. In 1945, the Allied Control Authority, in its sincere concern over the possible rebirth of a military Germany, would wrangle over such minutiae as maximum allowable tree sizes as a matter of war potential. Four years ago, decisions on German industry anticipated for 1949 would have precluded any possibility of an industrially revitalized Germany. And economic unity of Germany was the only unity under consideration—political unification was a concept to be shunned as completely as reorganization of the Wehrmacht.

Yet today, in order to score a point against the Russians, we are wooing the makers of two world wars, knuckling under to their demands, scuttling the principles we freely adopted four years ago as a precaution against World War III.

If some morning in the not too distant future, we should awaken to hear that German troops are drilling in the village squares; that the Krupp works have fired up and are producing armaments; that German scientists are researching in nuclear physics; and that a general resurgence of super-nationalism has grown—if any or all of these phenomena should occur, let us not be overly surprised.

France, twice the butt of German aggression, has been sold this conciliatory program on the assurance that the North Atlantic defense pact is her protection from a bullying neighbor.

If we can accept the premise that our turnabout German policy is the real basis for the Soviets' wanting to sit down and talk with us again—and it seems a fair premise—then the explanation made by the Department of State on the possible lifting of the blockade is somewhat off color. The three Western Governments have sought to bring about an end of the travel ban, the State Department said, "on terms consistent with their rights, duties and obligations as occupying powers in Germany."

We believe that our "rights, duties and obligations" in conquered Germany were and are 1. The restoration of German economy to the point that its occupation would not be a continuing drain on America's tax dollar and 2. The administration and reconstruction of Germany in such a way that her return to a peaceful world community on a democratic basis is assured.

After almost a year of heroic effort by the men of the air lift, we have become deceived into thinking that peace will be here when the Berlin blockade is ended. Nothing could be further from the truth. Does anyone think for an instant that Russia's mission, when we join her again at the conference table, will be to do anything but frustrate democratic influences in Germany? The Soviet task is first, last and always the obstruction of western, democratic ambitions.

A return to the four-power conference table will take us back to the point we left about a year ago. And only those with nerves of steel could say the world was at peace then.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg this week itemized the factors we should look for as a sign that peace was about "to break out." In order to see peace on the horizon, we must have from the Russians "an announcement—backed by deeds to give it some semblance of reality—that Moscow seeks to heal the East-West breach in world relations; that communism is ready to drop its plans for external conquest and subversion; that the Politburo is truly ready for mutual, good-faith efforts to create a livable world in which free self-determination shall decide any nation's accepted ideology . . ."

Under such conditions, and probably under such conditions only, could peace for Germany emerge from the Allied Control Authority and peace for the world from the United Nations.

New Jet Interceptor Makes First Flight

The Air Force's first jet interceptor fighter, the Republic XF-91, has successfully flown at Muroc Air Base, Calif., it was announced yesterday.

Powered by both turbojet and rocket engines, the radically new aircraft is designed to climb quickly and shoot down attacking bombers or missiles at high altitudes. Its top speed is believed to be close to that of sound.

Existing USAF jet fighters were designed for general use, with range of prime importance. The new Republic Aviation Corp. plane, built at Farmingdale, Long Island, is intended for the air defense of the United States, operating with the newly authorized radar screen.

It has swept-back wings, which are wider at the tip than where they join the fuselage. This is expected to give the craft better control at lower speeds, one of the problems of trans-sonic and supersonic aircraft.

The interceptor is powered by a General Electric J-47 jet engine, and will have four rocket motors mounted in the tail to boost its takeoff and climb performance and make possible short bursts of speed in combat.

Many months of tests are expected before there will be a decision on ordering the craft in quantity.

1948 Survey Cites Gains

tion," according to the survey. "The volume of overseas exports increased by 30 per cent, and at the same time, imports from overseas were reduced by 7 per cent, as abnormal requirements, mainly from the western hemisphere, diminished.

"Concurrently with the rise in production, there was a gradual return to conditions of monetary stability, which improved incentives to work in a number of countries, and contributed in turn to the rise in production.

In the field of public finance, Government budgets generally were balanced, and in some countries the surplus of revenue over current expenditure provided a major source of finance to capital investments.

"With the exception of a few countries, notably Italy, Hungary, Belgium and the western and Soviet zones of Germany, unemployment remained very low," the report said. The continued absence of mass unemployment was the major reason for the recovery of production being so much faster than after the first World War."

Yet, the report went on, the probable improvements over the next 5 or 10 years "are not likely to bring about a solution of the basic economic problem of Europe—the severe poverty in which the majority of the European peoples live." This could only be removed, the report suggested, "through revolutionary changes in the techniques of production.

Inadequate Capital

"The resources that are likely to be devoted to capital investment are far from adequate to secure any really substantial improvement in living standards, or to narrow the tremendous gap between the actual levels of productivity in European industry and the levels that could be reached if the capital equipment and organization of production were improved to standards comparable with those in the United States."

The report concluded not only that capital investment was too small, but that it was badly directed; that too much of it in some countries, notably in eastern Europe, went into heavy industry, whereas greater development of light industries might be of greater advantage.

The report was critical of the narrow nationalism of economic planning in both western and eastern Europe.

"The avowed aim of much current economic planning," it said, "is to bring about a higher degree of integration of the European economy. Yet the observable tendencies appear to move in the opposite direction. This is true not only in relations between two great complementary regions, the west and east of Europe, where political cleavage hampers the development of economic cooperation. It also appears to be true within these two regions owing to the rigid trading framework within which economic controls necessarily operate . . ."

Home Commodities

Most European countries, the report said, "tend to increase the range of commodities produced at home and thus to reduce their economic dependence on their neighbors."

Dealing at length with Europe's dollar shortage, the report warned that Europe's deficit was no less serious a problem than America's surplus. The two were described as "merely two different aspects of a single situation."

"Briefly expressed, there are only three possible lines of solution," the report argued. "Europe can expand exports, curtail imports, or go on borrowing. The United States can expand imports, curtail exports or go on lending.

Choice Facing U. S.

"When the European Recovery Program comes to an end, the United States will be faced with the choice of increasing its imports either from Europe or from other areas, or of continuing foreign lending in some form, again, either to Europe or to other areas.

"If the first alternative is chosen, Europe's capacity to export will be automatically enlarged either to the United States directly, or to third areas whose purchasing power will be raised through increased American buying.

"If the second alternative is chosen, and large-scale lending to Europe continues, the restoration of equilibrium in the balance of payments will not, after all, prevent an acute problem. If, on the other hand, large-scale lending continues to areas outside Europe, western Europe's power to export will again be enlarged through the increased purchasing power of borrowing areas.

Alternative Considered

"The United States may not choose to adopt any of these alternatives of increased imports or continued lending, but may instead restrict her exports and her production of those basic commodities of which large exportable surpluses at present exist. This, in turn, would probably force Europe to restrict her imports of basic commodities and possibly her production too.

"Thus the manner in which the American balance of payments problem is solved will be of primary importance to the European economy. But the initiative in each case lies with the United States rather than with Europe . . ."

At present, the report said, the Marshall Plan countries cannot keep moving toward "the maximum curtailment of imports from the United States and the development of substitute production in Europe itself or in other non-dollar areas.

Blow to Our Exports

"The United States is thus in a strange position of financing a program which is directed largely toward the reduction of its own exports. It faces the anomalous prospect that, by the end of the European Recovery Program it will have surpluses and excess production capacity in commodities for which it has helped to develop substitute sources of supply elsewhere; its own exports to Europe will be reduced below the depression-shrunk volume of 1938; and Europe nevertheless will still be short of dollars to cover its imports from the United States."

The report predicted that "the United States will probably continue for years to assist the outside world through investment loans, in much the same way as Britain financed capital development to the rest of the world throughout the nineteenth century.

"But the danger," according to the report, "is that so long as the prospects of lending are uncertain, and so long as American financial assistance continues to retain its present emergency character, the very form of assistance will tend to perpetuate the various emergency measures taken by other countries which obstruct progress toward freer and less discriminatory trading conditions.

For Flow of Dollars

"The only feasible alternative would be for the United States to plan ahead its long-term lending to the rest of the world in a manner that would generate a predictable and reasonably steady flow of dollars to the outside world and thus permit the restoration of international currency convertibility."

The report pointed to "serious obstacles" to the extension of trade between eastern and western Europe. Among these it mentioned "positive acts of interference and restriction" applied by the United States and Great Britain, on one hand, and the Soviet Union on the other.

The report cited not only the export licensing policy of the United States, designed to control exports to the Soviet side of Europe, but "the recent announcement of the United Kingdom of a new system of export licensing specifically aimed at controlling the movement of products which, while having their potential military value, are also indispensable to ordinary economic life and growth.

East Europe Trend

"The trend is also evidenced in eastern Europe," the report said, "by the abrupt slashes made by the U. S. S. R. and other eastern European countries in their trade with Yugoslavia . . .

"It is not in the province of this survey to comment in any way on the policies underlying these interferences in trade, but if political dissensions do not give way to more positive acts of cooperation, the economic consequences will inevitably take the form of a further division of Europe, and a failure to develop those complementary trading relations which would aid the various national economies to overcome their present weaknesses and their abnormal dependence on outside support."

Hankow Peace Move Reported by China

Policy Split

Connally Asks Franco Recognition

By the United Press

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee split openly with the Administration yesterday on United States policy toward Spain.

The Texan, known as the Administration's foreign policy spokesman in the Senate, told his colleagues he could "see no reason" why this country should not resume full diplomatic relations with the Franco government.

"I've never seen any logic in diplomatic relations with Russia and not with Spain," he said. He believed that some foreign nations who are "bitter" against Spain are "influencing our State Department" against recognizing the Franco government.

Connally made his statement in response to demands from both Republican and Democratic Senators that this country review its Spanish policy. It differed sharply from the official United States stand that this country is bound by the United Nations diplomatic boycott of Spain.

Asked if he thinks this Nation's policy toward Spain is changing, Connally told the United Press he believes he sees a "softening." He cited as "evidence" the United States absention from a vote on restoring ambassadors to Spain in the U. N. Political Committee last week.

The State Department had no comment on Connally's statement. A spokesman pointed out, however, that the United States did not vote on the U. N. diplomatic ban on Franco, but was bound to abide by the U. N. decision.

Secretary of State Acheson told Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) at a congressional hearing last week, that the Spanish regime "was a Fascist regime" and its return to the democratic family "depends on the action of the Spanish government."

McCarran touched off yesterday's heated debate by accusing the State Department of being "tongue-tied" on Spain and calling Acheson "evasive."

He said, however, that he and another Congressman had been told in a private conference at Acheson's office that an ambassador would be sent to Spain immediately if the U.N. admitted her to membership.

McCarran denounced as "false propaganda" claims that Spain does not have religious freedom. He said Spain would be "a most essential element" in the Atlantic security pact against Communism.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said the United States is making itself "perfectly ridiculous" in the eyes of the world by its Spanish policy.

Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.) said he couldn't see "any reason to let the Communists kill the Chinese, or to help the Dutch establish a dictatorship in Java," if this Nation does not send an ambassador to Spain.

"If anyone has fough the Communists," he asserted, "it has been the Franco regime."

Senate Republican Leader Wherry of Nebraska criticized the United States for not voting on the Spanish resolution in the UN Political Committee. "My theory about politics is that people like to know how you stand on issues," he said.

"It seems to me the public has a right to know. If war should come the one spot we would want from a military and economic point of view would be Spain."

Shanghai, May 10 (AP).—A move for peace with the Reds "is in full swing" in the Hankow area, the government's Central News Agency said today.

The agency asserted that simultaneously the battle for the "defense" of that great strongpoint in Central China had begun. (Central News did not say who was behind the purported peace move.)

Elsewhere, the government claimed a "decisive Nationalist victory" on the Shanghai front, and a press dispatch said the Reds had intensified their attacks on Tsingtao's outer defenses.

Gunfire could be heard in Tsingtao, anchorage for the U. S. Western Pacific fleet, the dispatch reported.

The newspaper Sin Wan Pao said the Hankow garrison had ordered all noncombatants to withdraw from the city. Foreigners were urged to leave. Ships were told to move 100 miles up the Yangtze.

Meanwhile, the Shanghai garrison claimed a big victory around Liuho, 30 miles northwest of Shanghai. The Liuho attack, however, sounded like a small-scale action.

The Nationalists also counter-attacked west of Kunshan, due west of Shanghai.

The garrison declared 1000 Reds were thrown back in an attack a few miles north of Kashing, 62 rail miles southwest of Shanghai. The Communists say they seized Kashing Sunday.

The Shanghai garrison communique was silent on the Communist thrust into southeast China toward Fukien Province.

(The Communist radio said 9000 Nationalist troops were "wiped out" in four days of fighting on this front.)

Dutch Chief Quits in Java Peace Effort

Batavia, Java, May 10 (U.P.)—Authoritative sources said today that Louis Beel has resigned as Netherlands High Commissioner in Indonesia, in protest against the cease-fire agreement concluded between Dutch and Republican representatives under United Nations mediation.

The sources believed Dr. H. J. van Royen, former Foreign Minister and U. N. delegate, would be named high commissioner.

Beel was said to have sent his letter of resignation to Queen Juliana last night.

Van Royen negotiated the cease-fire agreement Saturday—a preliminary step toward a full-dress peace conference at The Hague—over Beel's objections, authoritative quarters said.

The accord called for both sides to issue cease-fire orders to field commanders and for the Dutch to restore the Republican regime at its capital of Jogjakarta.

Beel, who was appointed high commissioner in November, directed the "police action" against the Indonesians in December.

Senators Hear Red Plan to Split U. S.

ducting hearings on a bill by Senatory McCarran (D., Nev.) to tighten United States immigration laws, Modelski said:

"I was told (on coming to the United States) that I would be used to serve as a human screen behind which Colonel Alef, using the assumed name of Bolkowiak, would engage in espionage and subversive activities."

He said he feigned agreement and took the assignment as military attache "in the hope that I could expose the activities of Colonel Alef and his espionage work."

The general had previously testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that throughout his service at the Washington Embassy he cooperated with American military intelligence.

This covered a period from May, 1946, to last August, when he walked out. He said he quit to escape trial by the Communist-dominated Polish government, "when I could no longer refuse their insistent demands that I return to Poland."

Modelski, a small, wiry man with thin gray hair and a pronounced accent, told the Senators that Colonel Alef was "the chief agent of the Polish Communists for all the American continent."

(House investigators said that when last heard from, Colonel Alef was the Polish military attache in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.)

Sought Arms Information

Modelski said Colonel Alef came to the United States under orders to "go throughout the country and obtain information on American production, particularly military production."

"This is part of the means by which they are preparing a revolution—preparing for strikes, riots and other ways in which to destroy American war production.

"They are preparing to steal secret weapons and armaments, and if the economic situation will permit, there will be war.

"Colonel Alef told me that this country is standing on the brink of collapse, that it not only has an economic depression but grave labor difficulties.

"He said the labor unions were well prepared for revolution, and he reported that the Communists had more than 400 organizations here."

The general said Colonel Alef was "very angry with John L. Lewis, William Green and David Dubinsky" because the American labor leaders "would not go along with the Communists."

He said Colonel Alef not only traveled in the United States and Mexico but "visited Canada many times." He added:

"I believe he was deeply involved in the riot at Bogota during the inter-American conference."

This was an allusion to the conference of American republics in Bogota, Colombia, early in 1948, which was interrupted by rioting.

Modelski said Colonel Alef went to Mexico six or eight weeks before the Bogota conference.

Modelski had previously told House investigators about the alleged attempts by Dr. Zlotowski, Polish U. N. representative, to ferret out American atomic bomb secrets. He gave only skeleton details.

Atomic Laboratory Attempt

On the other side of Capitol Hill, House spy hunters said they had testimony that the son of a University of California official helped a Communist attempt to pry into the school's atomic laboratory in 1941.

Paul Crouch, admitted former Communist and Miami (Fla.) newspaperman, gave the testimony in a secret session of the House Committee on Un-American Activities last Friday.

"I was active in trying to infiltrate all scientific research at the University of California," Crouch testified.

He said he was aided by a university official's son—the name was not disclosed—who drove him to secret meetings in palatial southern California homes.

Crouch said the plan was to organize the laboratory workers into special sections of the Communist Party. The project was so secret, he said, that party communications referred to them in Greek figures instead of by individual names.

May Be Quizzed in Poyntz Case

Crouch is scheduled to testify before the House committee again on May 24. But meanwhile a subpena has been issued for him to appear before a special Federal grand jury in New York next Tuesday, May 17. (In Miami, he said yesterday he had not yet received the subpena but expected it.)

The New York jury is expected to question Crouch, an employe of the Miami Daily News, about a published report quoting him as saying that Juliet Stuart Poyntz had been murdered and her body thrown into New York's East River. The report appeared in the New York World-Telegram.

Miss Poyntz, once a top United States Communist, mysteriously disappeared in June, 1937.

Check Into Old Drowning

Yesterday, in New London, Conn., police began checking their files to learn whether there was any connection between the disappearance of Miss Poyntz and the finding of the body of an unidentified woman in Long Island Sound more than a decade ago.

Capt. John J. Courtney of the New London police said the body had never been identified. It was discovered by a Coast Guard patrol boat on August 21, 1937, and Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman estimated it had been in the water about two months.

Pumpkin 'Evidence' Is Voted By House to Justice Dept.

By the United Press

Thanks to the House, the Justice Department finally will get the "pumpkin papers" for use in the Alger Hiss perjury trial.

The microfilmed copies of allegedly secret Government documents were seized from Whittaker Chambers, former Communist, and onetime magazine editor, by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Chambers, who claims he was the courier for a Communist spy ring that operated here before the war, told the committee that Hiss, a former State Department official, was one of his sources.

Hiss denied this in testimony before the committee, and now is awaiting trial in New York on perjury charges.

Committee investigators, armed with subpenas, made a midnight raid on Chamber's nearby Maryland farm last December, where he produced the microfilm—from a hiding place in a scooped-out pumpkin in the back yard.

The films have been under 24-hour guard in a safe in the committee's office since the raid. They could be surrendered only by a vote of the House.

Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.) formally notified the House yesterday that the Justice Department wanted the "evidence" for Hiss' trial. The request was approved by voice vote.

Barkley to Be Speaker At 'Salute to Israel'

Vice President Barkley will be principal speaker tonight at a "Salute to Israel" program, sponsored by the Jewish Community Council in honor of the nation's first anniversary.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the council, will preside at the meeting, scheduled for 8 p. m. in Constitution Hall. Miss Coplon Rows With Her Attorney

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The question of humor and the Judith Coplin espionage trial erupted in melodramatic fashion in full view of passersby yesterday on the walk outside District Court.

A noisy and demonstrative argument on the whole defense psychology regarding emotions and publicity was set off between Miss Coplin and her lawyer, Archibald Palber, when photographers attempted to take her picture on the walk at noon recess.

Palmer, who is a keen student of both humor and publicity, was all for it. But Miss Coplon—who has gone along with him thus far on such ideas—happened to have just been shown a Newsweek magazine article referring to her as "Miss Giggles."

While passersby stopped to gape she exploded.

"When I came here you told me to smile before the photographers and you see where it got me," she shouted, her voice shaking.

"These people say I'm taking this trial as a joke, or as something wonderful and glamorous," she went on, her heart-shaped earrings quivering. "I think the whole thing is horrible."

"Don't be a little fool," Palmer said, pulling at her arm. "People had great admiration for you when they saw you smiling in the face of all this trouble. Think of the great heroes of history. Think of Andrew Jackson.

"I don't want to be Andrew Jackson," Miss Coplon said.

Fears for Mother's Health

Palmer cocked his black hat for photographers while Miss Coplon went on: "It's my mother," she said, her voice shaking. "People speak to my mother in New York and they want to know if I'm brazen—if I smile they say I'm being facetious—if I'm glum I'm being something else. I don't care about myself. But this whole thing is killing my mother. I tell you, I'm afraid she's going to break."

Palmer, who is never at a loss for a reply, came back: "I'll have your mother laughing, too, before this is over."

In court yesterday Mrs. Rebecca Coplon loked as if she were the last person in the world who might be doing any laughing at all soon.

Clad in mourning for the death of her husband, who died since his daughter's arrest—she sat two steps behind her daughter yesterday, an ashen-faced woman looking much older than her age of 56.

Tears in Mother's Eyes

Once tears rushed to her eyes as she stood up to be identified by FBI Agent Brewer Wilson as having been seen by him during his surveillance of Miss Coplon in New York.

Wilson spent the entire day on the stand under a hammering barrage of questions from Palmer, who hinted at one point that a tipster's desire for revenge may have led to the arrest of the 27-year-old Miss Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev, 32, then a Russian UN employe, in New York on March 4.

Discussing the FBI's sources of information, Palmer asked Wilson:

"You get it from people who want revenue, who are angered at other people and want to get even?"

"It is conceivable," Wilson replied.

"Did you know that Gubitchev had a wife?" Palmer asked.

Judge Curbs Lawyers

Wilson said he did.

Earlier in the trial Palmer has suggested that there was a romantic interest between Miss Coplon and Gubitchev. The pair were arrested in New York and charged with a conspiracy to commit espionage. Miss Coplon, who was a Justice Department analyst at the time, is charged separately here with taking and copying Government documents to aid Russia.

The trial yesterday was marked by an avalanche of objections and frequent interchanges between Palmer and Prosecutors John M. Kelley, jr., and Raymond P. Whearty.

The bickering between the opposing lawyers, at times merely insulting, at one point reached such a storm-point that the gentle-voiced, white-haired Judge Albert L. Reeves, raised his hand and said:

"Now, gentlemen, we'll have to stop this. Do you gentlemen understand how unseemly you're behaving yourselves?"

Before the trial recessed until this morning, Palmer filed a motion asking for dismissal of the espionage charge against Miss Coplon for lack of "legal evidence of any kind" to support the indictment. Judge Reeves took the motion under advisement.

Britain Holds Pole as Spy

Manchester, England, May 10 (AP).—A Pole who has been in England three years was ordered held for trial at a preliminary hearing today on charges of trying to ferret out secrets of the United States and British air forces for a Polish spy ring.

Prosecutor E. G. Robey charged that the defendant, 40-year-old Marian Kaczmarek, sought to learn how many United States Air Force planes were based in England, whether they were jet-powered, and whether they were armed with high explosives or atom bombs.

Robey said Poland's assistant military attache in London recruited Kaczmarek for a ring which sought information on whether British airmen were being trained in American B-29 Superfortresses here, and whether there were underground airfields in Scotland.

Official lists show Maj. Julian Kajdy is assistant military attache at the Polish Embassy. The Polish Embassy refused to comment.

The United States sent B-29 bombers to England last July at the height of the cold war.

Sales Tax Foes Bar Filibuster

(R., N. Dak.), and Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) said they will vote against the sales tax but have no present plan to speak against it.

Flanders denounced the sales levy as a "petty thing, with millions of details, and expensive to administer." He said it was burdensome to low income groups. He said he would support the District Committee minority program for a broadened income tax and higher real estate taxes. He pointed out that the Senate two years ago approved the recommendation for an income tax that would reach generally all persons living here, but that the House blocked it.

Senator Pepper said the sales tax hits a larger portion of the income of those in the low income groups than it does for the high income groups. "What a lot of folks want to do is to pass the burden on to the poor people," he said.

Humphrey said that until the District gets home rule and the people here are given a voice in their own affairs "I don't think the District should be saddled with so inequitable measure as the sales tax. The sales tax is unfair in that it bears most heavily on those least able to pay."

Douglas said "I'm afraid if we approve a sales tax for the District it will be the prelude to a drive for a national sales tax."

Tobacco Sells at High Price

The chant of the tobacco auctioneers in southern Maryland at the opening sales for the year yesterday, sounded like "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Prices were up. Estimates of how much they were above last year ranged from 5 to 10 cents a pound. Official reports will not be available until the Maryland Department of Market Reports at Baltimore makes its first day's report late today. Last night, however, J. F. Haithcox of the Department, reported early sales well above a year ago.

"The general average of the first few rows sold was between 53 and 56 cents a pound," Haithcox told The Washington Post. The average for the first day last year was 43.15 cents."

Last year, the opening day's sales in the four markets—La Plata, Upper Marlboro, Hughesville and Waldorf—were 411,000 pounds. Government tobacco men predicted last night total sales yesterday may be double those of a year ago.

The 1948 crop, which went on sale yesterday, has been estimated at 34,950,000 pounds. If the price should be up as much as 5 cents above last year, the total income for the three Maryland tobacco counties, all near Washington, would be more than half a million dollars above last year, although almost a million fewer acres were planted in tobacco.

At Waldorf yesterday, James P. Ryon reported the top bid at 65 cents; a year ago the top sale was 63 cents. One small sale was made at La Plata, according to Manager James Schultz, at 72 cents, the highest reported for the day.

Mrs. Lou Gehrig Asks Research Aid

By The Associated Press

Mrs. Lou Gehrig, widow of the pride of the Yankees, pleaded with Congress yesterday to help find a cure for the disease which killed her husband in two pain-racked years.

A Senate Labor and Public Welfare subcommittee has before it a bill to set up a national multiple sclerosis institute.

This would try to discover the cause and cure for what Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) called "this hellish disease."

Mrs. Gehrig told how amyotrophic lateral sclerosis—a disease akin to multiple sclerosis, only it usually works faster—cut down the New York Yankees's first baseman in his prime.

A quarter of a million people in the United States suffer with this little-understood disease, she said. And these people usually are young, between the ages of 20 and 45, when it strikes.

Many Victims at Hearing

Among the spectators at the hearing were many who had multiple sclerosis. Some were in wheel chairs. All leaned forward as Mrs. Gehrig described the symptoms which must have been familiar to each of them.

Lou never drank or smoked, said Mrs. Gehrig, and he was in excellent physical condition.

"Then he was stricken by this insidious disease," she said.

"At first he simply couldn't play baseball with the skill which won him a place in the Cooperstown Hall of Fame. Then he couldn't play well enough to stay in the Yankee lineup.

"Finally he couldn't play baseball at all.

"As the disease progressed, he couldn't dress himself, he couldn't feed himself. He couldn't walk.

"Two years after he hung up his old Yankee uniform for the last time, he died."

Senators Daughter Afflicted

Mrs. Gehrig said that not only the victim, but also the relatives of the victim deserve consideration.

"To watch someone close to you," she said, "become a helpless, hopeless paralytic and to know that medical science is powerless to halt the progress of the disease is something which no person should be called upon to endure."

Senator Tobey introduced the bill, and acted as a sort of master of ceremonies at yesterday's hearing.

In a dramatic opening speech, he told of the horror a father feels when he realizes a child of his has the disease. For Tobey was that father. His daughter, Mrs. Sterling Dean, who has had multiple sclerosis for 19 years, was in the room.

Tobey did not say how much he figures it would cost to set up a national foundation to study multiple sclerosis. But he said:

"Now comes the challenge to the United States Senate to fight this hellish disease. If we can spend five billion dollars for European recovery, if we can spend 12 billion dollars every month to fight a war—well, we can't sit back and say we can't afford to fight multiple sclerosis."

Child Accident Menace Cited

Child safety has become a major public-health problem which overshadows all others in the 1-to-14-year age group, health officials were told here yesterday.

Dr. George M. Wheatley, third vice president of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, stressed the point at a meeting of city and State health officers at the Statler Hotel.

Reduction of mortality from accidents to children, he said, has not kept pace with medical gains against child diseases in the past 40 years.

"A major responsibility of medical and public health agencies is to develop and apply measures for the control of the mortality resulting from accidents among children," he declared. "Accidents today are the first cause of death among children, and represent the foremost child health problem."

Dentists Told Only Fluorine Averts Decay

Fluorine, by laboratory test standards at least, has proved itself to be the only effective chemical against tooth decay, Washington dentists were told here yesterday.

Dr. Robert M. Stephan, senior dental surgeon of the National Institute of Dental Research, reported the finding of Public Health Service researchers at a monthly meeting of the District Dental Society, at Georgetown University.

Laboratory tests of other chemicals, including recently publicized dibasic ammonium phosphates, have shown that they have no inhibitory effect on the growth of organisms known to cause tooth decay, Dr. Stephan said. At least three dentifrices are now being marketed under claims their ammonia ingredients act against tooth decay organisms.

In another paper, Dr. Robert C. Likens, assistant to Dr. Stephan, reported on the decay-resistant qualities of fluorides absorbed by human enamel. The findings closely paralleled results of clinical investigations which have shown that teeth treated with fluorine develop about 40 per cent less cavities than untreated teeth.

Health Outlay Boost Urged

The Montgomery County Public Health Lay Council yesterday voiced its support of health department proposals for extensive improvement in the county's public health program.

The action was taken at the council's fifteenth anniversary luncheon in the St. John's Episcopal Church hall, Bethesda. Nearly 200 lay delegates indorsed proposals calling for better pay for public health workers, more public health nurses, a five-year tuberculosis-control program and establishment of a county health center in Rockville.

The group's indorsement followed a plea for support of the program by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, who gave special emphasis to what he termed a critical shortage of public health nurses in the county.

A highlight of the luncheon session was a debate and forum discussion of President Truman's proposed compulsory health-insurance bill.

New Remedy Is Studied For Arthritis

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Discovery of a compound which gives "dramatically effective" pain relief to arthritics has been reported by research biochemists of Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

Even long-bedridden and wheelchair-bound sufferers of rheumatoid arthritis have danced, run up long flights of steps, and otherwise cut agile capers within 24 to 72 hours after injection of the new compound, they reported.

Named Compound E, its limitations are its scarcity and short duration of activity. Like insulin for diabetics, the drug must be taken repeatedly.

Limitations Stressed

Confirming initial reports of its value, Dr. Walter Bauer, of Boston, Mass., stressed those limitations last night in a telephoned interview for The Washington Post.

Present supply and laboratory production rate of Compound E will be sufficient only to treat 20 arthritics for the remainder of 1949, he said. Nor can that production be "materially stepped up" under present extraction techniques, he said.

Until some means are found to produce the agent in quantity, Dr. Bauer said, it may be necessary to set up a medical commission "to determine which few patients may be treated."

Dramatic Results

Dr. Bauer of the Massachusetts General Hospital has used the compound on two arthritic patients. The results, he said, were "very dramatic" and similar to reported successes on 15 patients at the Mayo Clinic, where the compound was first isolated seven months ago.

But the dosages must be repeated daily, or symptoms of the puzzling malady of the centuries return completely within one to three days, he said. The patient then becomes no worse nor no better than before treatment, he explained.

The compound, now synthetically produced from stomach acids of cattle, was initially isolated from adrenal glands of animals. Credited with the discovery, and publicly acclaimed as potential Nobel Prize candidates, are Dr. Philip S. Hench, who heads the medicine division of Mayo Clinic, and Dr. Edward C. Kendall, research chemist and specialist in hormone studies at the Clinic.

Virtually nothing is known of the mode of action of Compound E, Dr. Bauer said. And it can only be suspected that rheumatoid arthritis, which afflicts millions of persons, is a deficiency disease, perhaps in secretions of the pituitary gland, he said.

Daily Injections

If such is the case, he explained, daily intramuscular injections of Compound E apparently overcome the deficiency and bring complete relief and freedom of movement to the patient. It is still not known what effect, if any, may result from longtime continuous use of the compound, he cautioned.

The compound was isolated in the search for a common factor of jaundice and pregnancy, both of which have long been known to give unexplained pain relief to arthritics. It was used immediately on humans, by-passing usual preliminary animal experimentations, Dr. Bauer said.

Dr. Bauer stressed that the discovery is still in "the developmental stage," and it only can be hoped that pharmaceutical chemists can find a way to produce Compound E in quantity.

Until then, he said, it should prove invaluable in clinical investigation of rheumatoid arthritis and its companion ill, rheumatic fever, the latter accounting for a third of all deaths from heart disease.

On the Town

You can have a fine time Thursday night and also do your good deed for the day if you'll drop into Rowe's Sea Food Grill, 913 11th st. se., around 9 p. m. From 9 p. m. to 2 a. m., a host of Washington entertainers will give another in a series of "cancer benefit nights," with all proceeds going to the American Cancer Society.

Miss Martin

Tentatively billed for the benefit, are Bandleader Gene Williams, Singer Johnny Bradford (you've seen him on TV), Dona Mason (Colony Lounge). Buddy Baer, the handsome fighter-turned-singer, also may appear.

Buddy is starring these nights at the Kavakos Club, which held a cancer benefit night April 30 and raised upwards of $500.

Frances Martin, whose picture brightens this column, opened at the Casino Royal last night in a tap dancing solo billed as "sexational." A tall, talented blonde, she gets something of the exotic into her numbers—sometimes a difficult task for tappers.

The Casino also features Kay Carol and Tommy—the feminine version of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. Ringside customers are likely to find themselves talking back to Tommy when Kay brings the inquisitive dummy around.

Charles and Celeste, a ballroom dance team, round out the show.

Most entertainers get around considerably. Take the Continentals, the vocal-instrumental duo keeping the customers happy at the Annapolis Hotel's Anchor Room.

The feminine half is petite Lucille Rodgers, who does a competent job with the electric guitar on popular and semiclassical tunes. She sang here and there with Charlie Barnet's orchestra, was featured at the Carioca Club in Rio, has appeared up and down this land with her current partner, accordionist Ralph Michaels.

Michaels, during the war, toured this country with a USO unit. After entering the service, he found himself playing for GIs in England, France, Germany, Italy and Austria.

NIGHTERY NOTES . . . Add look alikes—Nora Chandler, new hostess at the Sheraton Lounge, and Hollywood's Billie Burke. Blonde Nora calls it an average day when two dozen citizens stroll up to her and begin: "Par'n me, but aren't you . . .?" She's done no acting, but has been a model. Then there is Michel, the violinist, and his violinist son, Stanley. You'd have difficulty telling them apart if Stanley weren't so much bigger than his pappy . . . Water Gate Inn, the Dutch-style restaurant overlooking the Potomac at 2700 F st. nw., is being redecorated. The painters get to work when the last guest departs, swab away until sunrise . . . Wonderful listening department: The agent for Bucky Lawson, the Neptune Room's young drummer, tells us Bucky flies to Florida each week on his day off, flies back the next day in time for work. The lad, it seems, "can't wait for summer to get his sun-tan."—

Negroes Need Better Care, Doctors Told

Annapolis, Md., May 10 (AP).—Physicians must see to it that minority groups get adequate medical care, Judge Joseph Sherbow of the Baltimore Supreme Court said today.

Too many Negroes are neglected now, he told the spring conference of the Maryland-District of Columbia-Delaware Hospital Association.

"The Negro can't have a private room in the big hospitals, and the facilities are not equal," Sherbow said.

He was one of three speakers who discussed health proposals for this country after conferees heard about Great Britain's plan.

Dr. James Mackintosh, dean of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, said he thought England was moving toward "utopian" hospital service.

Sherbow told the hospital officials "that great group of people in the middle class must be free of worry over the cost of illness." Doctors should get behind a voluntary medical care plan, he said.

"Some complain bitterly if the Government comes in and spends a lot more money, but the Government is doing it and will be doing it."

Man Kisses, Stabs Estranged Wife

Rockford, Ill., May 10 (U.P.).—Thomas Gates, 25, told police today he stabbed his estranged 18-year-old wife as he kissed her passionately after she refused to return to him.

Gates was captured after he knifed his wife, Wanda, in her room here and then leaped from a second-story window.

Mrs. Gates was "near death" at Swedish American Hospital. Gates was held in city jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Gates told police he came here from his home in Beloit, Wis., to ask his wife to make up with him. They had separated Tuesday after nine months of marriage.

He said he brought 17 roses and promised his wife they would move to Texas, where her family lives.

"I gave her the roses and tried to convince her that she should come back to me," he said. "She answered: 'It's too late. Anyway, I've got a date for tonight.' That made me mad.

"I asked her to kiss me. She did. While we were kissing I stabbed her in the back. She fell on her back on the bed and I stabbed her again in the breast."

2 'Wives' Vie For $100,000

District Court was petitioned yesterday to determine which of two women was the wife of Richard J. McMahon, a butcher here, when he died last year.

He left the bulk of his $100,000 estate to Mrs. Virginia Lee Williams McMahon, 4523 Nebraska ave. nw, and in his will called her his wife by a "valid marriage."

Contesting the will is Mrs. Theresa McMahon, 1241 Shepherd st. nw. She claims she never was legally divorced from McMahon, though she filed for a Florida decree in 1941. She said she abandoned the suit.

Mrs. Virginia McMahon's attorney, Lewis Shapiro, submitted affidavits from a Florida attorney and his secretary stating that Mrs. Theresa McMahon testified in her divorce suit, got a decree, and subsequently began proceedings to obtain a divorce from another man, whom she allegedly met in Florida.

War Ordered On Miami Vice

Miami, Fla., May 10 (U.P.).—A grand jury today was charged to act "vigorously" against gambling and vice rackets in Greater Miami that allegedly have made 25-million-dollar payoffs to public officials.

Circuit Judge Stanley Milledge told the jurors the time is ripe to attack the "cancerous growth" on the Florida winter playground. He charged that police and public officials are getting 25 million dollars in protection payoffs.

The grand jury was called as a result of reports in Miami's two daily newspapers that illegal bookmaking, lotteries and prostitution were operated openly under protection.

A previous grand jury, whose term ended last week, had reported it was not its function to "correct the mistakes of the voters" who chose the public officials.

The Miami Herald and the Miami Daily News have reported that vice racketeers are paying individual policemen and public officials up to $2000 a week for protection.

Both newspapers referred pointedly to the fact that Miami uniformed policemen had been ordered not to raid gambling, illegal liquor or prostitution establishments but to report them to the detective bureau.

The Daily News said illegal bookmakers obtained telephones through payoffs to telephone company representatives and "tips" to the phone company workers who make installations.

The Florida Legislature now in session has passed a law prohibiting the use of telephone or telegraph wires for illegal bookmaking operations.

him yesterday, said that Scott did not seem upset or nervous.

The 5-foot, 11-inch youth with the crew haircut sang bass in the church and school choirs. He is the son of an insurance and real estate man.

Both Scott and his victim attended Jefferson High Schol, where she was a grade behind him. He was a member of the high school wrestling team and was described as very popular with girls.

Anonymous Tip Given

An anonymous telephone call directed police attention toward Scott and the scratches on his face made him a prime suspect. His victim had put up a terrific fight before she died, attested to by the bits of flesh and hair beneath her fingernails.

Police said detectives questioned Scott in relays under blazing lights for five hours before he finally broke down an confessed. Previously, medical authorities said that the victim had not been raped.

Garrett Scott, the bay's father, left police headquarters before the murder charge was announced. He was weeping.

"The boy has never been in trouble before," he sobbed. "I can't believe it."

Scott's arrest came after police had spent more than 24 hours tracking down fruitless leads.

3 Judges Try Disbarment Case Against New Market Lawyer

Disbarment proceedings against Attorney Woodrow E. Faulkner of New Market, Va., were started in District Court yesterday before a three-judge tribunal.

Faulkner is charged by the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of District Court with two instances of malpractice involving Marvin McGraw, the defendant in a divorce action, and Ernest Harris, 2017 19th st. nw., who was jailed for theft of an automobile which another man confessed stealing.

Both men complained to the committee that Faulkner had withheld money from them without justification. The case, before Justices F. Dickinson Letts, James W. Morris and Henry A. Schweinhaut, was continued until this morning.

On the witness stand, Faulkner said that his records in the McGraw and Harris cases were in storage and were not available in the disbarment proceedings because the storage bill had not been paid.

New Assault Follows Bail

A 36-year-old mechanic was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with stabbing a 42-year-old theater cashier with an icepick just three and a half hours after he had been released on bond for allegedly beating her.

The defendant is Avis C. Summers, 35, of 1438 Fairmont st. nw. He was ordered committed to jail after bond was set at a total of $3300 in the beating and stabbing counts. The case was continued until May 31.

The alleged victim, Miss Audrey W. Foote, was reported in good condition at Garfield Hospital, where she was taken Monday with stab wounds in the left chest.

Phones And Gambling

Judge Holtzoff's decision stops far short of disposing of the tangle in which the withdrawal of telephone service from alleged gamblers has become involved. The judge says that United States Attorney Fay was "properly performing his duty" in trying to remove telephones suspected of being used for gambling purposes. But he also says that the telephone company must be prepared to prove unlawful use of the telephone in each case before it can act. It is not sufficient to have the word of the public prosecutor that violations have occurred.

The decision would seem to throw too much discretion upon the telephone company. Enforcement of the law is peculiarly a public function, and even in so limited a matter as depriving alleged criminals of telephones the responsibility must be kept in public hands. We start with the proposition that the public interest demands the denial of telephones to those who systematically use them for violation of the law. Use of this weapon against gamblers has been questioned chiefly because of the manner in which it has been done. Under the existing tariff Mr. Fay can get a telephone removed simply by telling the company that it is being used illegally. No hearing or proof is required. Obviously such a system is wide open to abuse. It violates that fundamental concept of fair play which says that a man must be given a hearing before action adversely affecting his interests can be taken.

However, this does not imply that we think Mr. Fay has acted unfairly. On the contrary, he has struck a courageous blow at organized gambling, following a pattern that has long been in effect. It is now evident, however, that this pattern is faulty, and the community should insist on its correction so that Mr. Fay will have full use of every effective weapon against gamblers. What is needed, we repeat, is some means of hearing charges before any decision to remove a telephone is reached. Since that function cannot be trusted to any private company, it must be assigned to some public agency unless Congress should step in and create a new body for this purpose.

One possible solution would be amendment of the existing tariff so as to provide hearings before the Public Utilities Commission in cases of this sort. Instead of immediately taking out the telephone of a client accused of violating the law, the company could be instructed to ask the PUC for permission to take such action when complaint is made. The PUC could then conduct a hearing, and, if desired, its order could be appealed to the courts. Certainly this arrangement would be a vast improvement over the present lodgment of discretion in the United States attorney or the transfer of that discretion to the telephone company, as Judge Holtzoff seems to suggest.

Movement Of Promise

President Truman's appeal for prompt enactment of the bill that will enable him to go forward with reorganization of the executive branch will strike many responsive chords. In spite of criticism as to some details, the recommendations of the Hoover Commission have won overwhelming popular support. There are few more urgent tasks than that of recasting our vast Government into more manageable patterns. The actual work cannot be undertaken, however, until the Senate passes the bill to give the President a new grant of reorganization powers.

The President's interest in the matter is immediate and direct. The reorganization suggested by the Hoover Commission would give him more effective command over his Administration. It would straighten out lines of authority from the White House to the immense, sprawling proliferation of Federal agencies. Only by giving the President such a new grip upon the authority of his office can the country approach that efficiency and reduction of waste that everyone wishes. The economy-minded men in Congress should be the first to hasten this reform.

Several years will doubtless be required to complete the modernization that is contemplated. That makes it all the more important to get started promptly. Since each reorganization plan will have to lie before Congress for 60 days before becoming effective, the Senate will have to speed up action on the bill if any streamlining is to be accomplished this year. Here is a needle that should find its mark. When the bill does come to a vote, the most constructive action the Senate could take would be to restore the provision requiring a concurrent resolution of both houses to set aside a presidential reorganization plan. This would avoid a controversy by bringing the Senate bill into line with that passed by the House. It would also avoid the danger of stalling an undertaking of great promise by allowing one house to thwart the actual operation of a policy declared by the Congress as a whole.

Report On Europe

The newspaper summary supplied by the Associated Press of the 1948 report of the U. N. Economic Commission for Europe did an injustice to a comprehensive and rewarding review of economic trends in Europe. The injustice lay in the conclusion attributed to it. It was supposed to say that the Marshall Plan was hurting instead of helping Europe. The headlines bore the same theme, with the result that Congress, now at the stage of appropriating the funds for ECA, raised its collective eyebrows, and called for explanations. The impression left by the summary will probably not be corrected by the "clarification" sent out by the AP, so it is well here and now to say that there is nothing in the report which would substantiate the misleading headlines and conclusions accompanying the cabled summary.

The European Commission includes the Soviet Union and its satellites as well as the United States. After the demise of UNRRA, the satellites wanted a successor body set up by the United Nations, and their agitation could not be restrained by Moscow. They could not wait forever for the American slump on which the Russians appeared to be counting. At length the Russians gave in, but have used the commission to block progress. They wanted an indirect veto power. They called for the liquidation of the European Coal Organization and the European Inland Transport Organization—functional bodies set up to work for integration in Europe. They sought to restrict the agenda. They insisted on the exclusion of any economic issue touching Germany. Their tactics became so disheartening that a direct appeal had to be made to Moscow, and this was successful to the point at least of letting the European Commission keep up its studies and maintain technical committees of the nations devoted to promotion of trade. Yet Moscow has never taken kindly to the work, and would certainly have liked to see the commission take potshots at the Marshall Plan, instead of working parallel with it.

This, however, is not at all what the commission did in the 1948 report. It turned out, instead, an excellent review, with an emphisis on what Europe should do in order to become less dependent in 1952. The figures are testimony to considerable progress. That the report did not pay tribute to the Marshall Plan as a responsible agent for this progress was natural in the circumstances, but the tribute is implicit in the premises. The warnings are worthy of careful attention in ECA and in the participating nations of the Organization of European Economic Co-operation, ECA's opposite in Paris. ECA's stress on production is not matched by its emphasis on integration, and it is in this respect that the participating nations have been laggard, as the commission's report points out.

Listen to this comment: "The programmes show a tendency toward greater diversification of the industrial structure of individual countries, which appears to be a reflection of the desire to cover needs as far as possible by home production." And this: "There is a tendency for all countries to develop autarchical economies rather than to achieve an economic development calculated to lead to a better integration of the European economy as a whole. In Europe the size of the national economies is such that in most cases full advantage could only be taken of the economies of large scale production through international specialization in industrial development." Yet another quotation: "Investment programs have been formulated with a view to securing a balanced development in industry within the national boundaries rather than a balanced development for Europe as a whole," a statement fortified by the item showing consumption of steel for Europe outside Germany and Britain amounting to no less than 25 million tons in 1948 compared with 17 million tons in 1938.

Well said! Here is an echo of what we ourselves have been saying since the Marshall Plan was launched. The Europeans have been thinking too much in terms of national problems instead of the problem of Europe. Here is where this country's "pushing and prodding," as Mr. Dewey used to say, must be directed.

Privilege And Rights

The privilege accorded nonmembers of congressional committees of sitting in on committee hearings and questioning witnesses cannot be extended to all 96 members of the Senate. Even less would it work for all 435 members of the House. Indeed, the privilege—and it is distinctly a privilege, not a right—is easily susceptible of abuse. Senators Watkins and Donnell have abused it by taking up approximately two thirds of the hearings with their own lengthy questioning of witnesses. Their behavior, in fact, is likely to discourage future extension of this courtesy, and Senator Watkins, who walked out huffily on the Atlantic Pact hearings on Monday, is not likely to win much sympathy.

But the alternative of keeping the non-committee members of both houses in the dark on foreign developments is no solution, either. Each member must vote from time to time on these issues. And foreign policy matters will continue to be more rather than less important to the Nation's welfare. Every member of both houses must somehow be kept informed on such matters. The suggestion advanced in these columns two weeks ago seems a practicable and sensible answer to the need. The nonpartisan professional staffs of the two foreign policy committees are capable of conducting seminars for all members who wish to attend. Senators perhaps more than Representatives might find the pressure of other business too heavy to permit regular attendance. But their administrative assistants could stand in their places and keep the Senators briefed on developments. This would be enlightenment at secondhand, of course; but it would be better than the darkness in which suspicions gain sway over judgment.

Atomic Commissioners

President Truman has chosen wisely in nominating Dr. Henry D. Smyth and Prof. Gordon Dean as new members of the Atomic Energy Commission. These men are well equipped to appreciate the delicate balance that the commission must maintain between military and civilian needs of atomic energy. They also are men who may be expected to understand the necessity for keeping public interest alive by taking the public into their confidence on those policy decisions outside the secret area.

Dr. Smyth will replace Dr. Robert F. Bacher, the only scientist member of the commission, who will now go to an active scientific post at the University of California. As a distinguished nuclear physicist, Dr. Bacher has served as a sort of technical regulator on the commission, and he has spoken with great clarity. Beyond this, he has displayed an awareness of human relationships that has helped elicit the cooperation of his colleagues and subordinates.

His replacement is a man with many of the same qualities. Dr. Smyth returned to Princeton to build up the physics department after serving as a scientific consultant to the Manhattan District during the war. He probably is best known for his report on Atomic Energy for Military Purposes published at the end of the war, a report which remains an outstanding example of lucidity in technical writing. It is a measure of the hysteria that has since afflicted the country that the Smyth Report came to be instanced as a major breach of security. The fact is, as Dr. Smyth himself has pointed out, that the real breach occurred in the Hiroshima explosion. At the time the publication of the Smyth Report was approved by Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, then head of the Army's Manhattan District, and it has been cogently defended by former Secretary of War Stimson. In any event we hope the Smyth Report will not become an issue in Senate confirmation hearings, because Dr. Smyth's role was that of technical expert rather than policy-maker.

Mr. Dean, now a professor of law at the University of Southern California, brings to the commission some of the richness of experience of his editor-predecessor, William W. Waymack. He has had a varied background in the law, in drafting legislation and framing policy as a Department of Justice attorney, and more recently as an assistant to Justice Robert Jackson in the Nuernberg trials. At Nuernberg he showed a deep sense of public accountability and regard for the truth. He is well grounded in the democratic concepts so essential to the post he will fill.

These are men to whom great power is entrusted. Whether they use it wisely will only be known to themselves and their colleagues, for beyond appropriations there is no real check on the Atomic Energy Commission. That fact alone is reason for additional emphasis on the release of non-secret information to facilitate intelligent congressional and public appraisal. How to develop a policy of more candor vis a vis such things as the Bikini test findings is probably the biggest problem the new nominees will have to face.

Virginia Progress

If majority members of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women need any evidence that their ban on Negro membership is out of keeping with the trend, even in the South, they have only to look at the action of the Virginia State Association recently. A large majority of the delegates came out against racial segregation and instructed the State president to vote against it at the national AAUW convention in June. This forthright declaration was in keeping with the earlier stand taken by the Arlington branch. It is a testimonial to the way many intelligent persons in Virginia are thinking these days.

There remain, to be sure, many impediments to the full attainment of civil rights in Virginia, as pointed out at the Virginia Social Science Association meeting two weeks ago. Not the least of these is the constitutional requirement for segregation. But the sensible vote of the AAUW, the widespread efforts spurred by court orders to equalize school facilities, the election last month of Richmond's first Negro councilman—these are straws in the wind that we welcome.

Have raced to us across the lonely skies.

Social Agencies

The planned merger of four District private child welfare agencies is indeed welcome news. Lately Washingtonians have been subjected to a barrage of fund-raising campaigns. Hardly a week goes by without the inauguration of a new fund-raising drive.

The problem rests in the fact that recent years have witnessed the formation of several new and independent social welfare agencies in the fields of cancer, polio, rheumatic fever, crippled children and mental health, to mention a few. The problem is aggravated by the failure of the Washington Community Chest in recent years.

By employing professional fund raisers, by dramatizing appeals and applying commercial advertising techniques, most social agencies can usually expect larger operating funds than they would realize as Community Chest members. Unfortunately, this trend, in addition to acting as an imposition on the generosity of newspapers and radio stations, tends to confuse the public, leads to useless competition among agencies, leads to a specialization in social service that tends to a concern over parts of an individual and results in the expenditure of an unreasonably high percentage of income for fund-raising activities.

Washington social leaders will do well to give serious thought to the advantages offered by merging the functions of some of its multitudinous social agencies, and by insisting on their greater coordination through the facility of United Community Services. If United Community Services is anxious to assist and advise Washington's social agencies in a movement designed to stimulate their coordination and increase the efficiency of their services to the community, it deserves the wholehearted cooperation of the social agencies and the earnest support of the general public.

Animal Experiments

I should like to commend you highly for the position you have taken in connection with the use of animals for laboratory experimentation. The recent editorials which appeared in your paper were clear and to the point and they expressed, I am sure, the feeling of the vast majority of your readers and subscribers. Furthermore, they expressed the feeling of people who do not doubt in the least that progress in medical and other scientific fields is the direct result of honest, hard work in the laboratory, much of which involves the use of animals.

It is ironical that in this enlightened and scientifically progressive age of ours, research workers and medical students find it necessary to take positive steps to assure the continuation of their work, much of which has lengthened the lives (directly or indirectly) of those who try to block it.

More than ever before our populace is reaping the benefits of laboratory work on problems involving infectious processes, malignancies, circulatory disturbances, drug standardization and test, surgical procedures, new and better anesthetics, hormone and vitamin deficiencies and therapy, and many others, using dogs, cats, rats, rabbits, and guinea pigs as test animals.

My associates and I recently returned from Detroit, where we read papers before sections in physiology, pharmacology and nutrition of the Federated American Societies for Experimental Biology; papers pointing to the nutritional state as a factor in anesthesia; papers on the relation of Vitamin C to gingivitis, and on a possible role of the adrenal gland in the metabolism of Vitamin C. All of this work has far-reaching implications, and our findings in animal experiments have enabled us to extend the work to humans.

I am sure that, like others working in these fields, we have absolutely no apologies to make for trying in our humble and scientific way to improve man's lot here on earth; and the animals that have been used in the work we have done have made a distinct contribution to our scientific knowledge. They have not been among the five or six thousand animals here in the District Pound dumped yearly into bins and gassed to death because they were unclaimed.

Anti-Communist Spain

In Herblock's May 6 caricature of General Franco, he showed Franco with a bloodied sword in his belt and Europeans looking over a fence supposedly turning Communist because of him.

The civil war that was fought in Spain was fought between Communists and anti-Communists. The Communists had succeeded in gaining control of the government and the Communists proceeded on their program in Spain of liquidating all opposition.

The Communists failed in Spain because the anti-Communists under Franco succeeded in defeating the Russian-backed Communist regime. And fortunate it is for us, engaged in the cold war, that a Communist-dominated government subservient to Moscow is not in power in strategic Spain.

During the war, Spain maintained a friendly neutrality to the United States and, in writing, President Roosevelt showed his appreciation to the Franco regime. Let us not make the mistake of upsetting Franco and turn Spain into the hands of the Communist International which would resume converting Spain into a Poland, Bulgaria or Hungary, establishing the iron curtain in the Mediterranean.

"Tea Relation"

Without wishing to indulge in odorous comparisons, candor compels me to asseverate, anent your May 6 editorial, that it is impossible to make a cup of tea anywhere in the United States that comes within a mile of the brew enjoyed by the humblest of London cockneys. Of course, the utter ignorance of American would-be tea makers, with their abominable tea balls and lukewarm water, goes a long way to account for the anemic slops they call tea. But it would make little difference if they brewed the infusion correctly; it would still be nothing like the real thing.

Whatever your destination in the British Isles or that part of the European continent with which I am familiar, you can be dead sure that from the moment you disembark from an American ship or plane until you are once more back on board, you will not taste anything even faintly resembling a good cup of coffee. Apart from the demonstrable fact that the water in Britain and Europe has no affinity with the coffee bean, there would seem to be something in the atmosphere that puts a jinx on coffee-making.

Naturally we are a Nation of coffee drinkers. Nowhere on earth is coffee so universally good as in the United States. By the same token—and I don't exempt the British Embassy—you've a better chance of finding crocodiles in the Potomac than a decent cup of tea this side of Erin. HAYDEN TALBOT.

Washington.

Your editorial, "Tea Relations," leads me to the discussion of tea in America.

From the moment one enters a shop, goods of every kind gleam in their cellophane. But tea? One asks timidly. The shop assistant looks a little blank. He directs me to a little mound of packages almost hidden behind a much larger mound of packaged cookies, and produces a small carton of tea, in bags. Gulping, with the taste of calico or gauze still in my mouth from recent experience of attempting to drink the awful result of their diffusion in hot water, I say, "No, please, not in bags, just loose in the packet." So after some more search I get it.

"What on earth have you got there?" says Susie, my friend whose kitchen I am invading. "Susie, I have tea," I say. "Have you a teapot?" She produces a green pottery streamlined affair rather the shape of an Aladdin's lamp!

At least the kettle is the good old kind with a great fat belly and spout and handle in the right places. So I fill it at the cold tap, not with water that has been through the heating plant.

While the kettle is coming to the boil I set cups and saucers, small basin and fine wire strainer (she actually has one), jug filled with milk, not cream, and sugar on the tray.

About a cupful of the "singing" water poured into the teapot to heat it. Then just as the kettle boils I throw out the water in the teapot and take three large teaspoonfuls of tea and drop them into the pot. With the gas still brightly burning and the teapot in my left hand I lift the kettle with my right and almost as it leaves the flame the water is being poured onto those precious leaves in the bottom of my heated teapot.

Now tea should be drunk out of fine china cups, but fine china is apt to have a very short life. So the compromise is somewhat thicker china or even pottery cups. Tea should be so hot that metal or glass become impossible.

I take up the teapot, hold the fine wire strainer over the cup and before pouring tip the teapot backwards from the spout twice or three times with a little flick of the wrist . . . It turns the leaves over in the water and lets them each swim around enough to expand completely.

"Now I will show you by simple demonstration why it really tastes like tea," I say to Susie afterwards. I pour away the remaining tea in the teapot. Then for Susie's inspection I tip the leaves out onto a plate. To her amazement they completely cover a salad plate, and as I pointedly remark, would never have been able to expand like that in a bag!

American Phenomenon

By Malvina Lindsay

Convention Time

THIS IS the time when Americans, to the wonderment of sociologists and visiting foreigners, make their pilgrimages to Mecca—which may be any convention city. Though the convention is as old as man, it has reached a mass production and an importance in this country that make the American manifestation a marvel to the world.

This spring an unusually large number of foreign visitors, delegates and speakers have been sitting in on American conventions, particularly those of women. For men's conventions, except those of professional groups, are devoted largely to giving their patrons opportunity for a fling.

Not so women's! Their week-long, 18-hour a day seminars on what should be done about the world have an influence on American life to which this country, including politicians and business interests, is just beginning to awaken.

SOME VISITORS who have been giving Martian appraisal to these mass gatherings have this to say of them:

They are impressed above all that so many thousands of the Nation's most intelligent and dynamic women, leaders in their communities, should assemble for a week on figurative mountain tops to consider problems of their society.

They are amazed at the iron stamina of these delegates, who can rise at 6 a. m. for a daily round of meetings and social events that ends at midnight or later. They are also impressed by the way the delegates, meeting in attractive cities, forgo beaches, drives, sightseeing for convention grind.

They are often astounded at the amount of practical work these delegates do in their communities—at the projects for recreation, sanitation, vocational guidance, they have pushed through.

They foresee from these conventions, and the great club movement underlying them, a tremendous influence on national and international affairs as the trend toward independent voting grows. Yet—

They wonder why these groups seem to skirt some of the basic social issues with which they should be particularly concerned. One of these is human relationships—in home, labor, office, community, but most of all in family life. They ask why American women, in view of the high divorce rate and growing family instability, are not more concerned with education for marriage and with family life counseling. Another human problem now apparently neglected is how society can prepare itself for the growing percentage of older population.

FINALLY, some of the foreign observers inquire why so much time is spent by women on platforms praising and thanking each other. They point out that often a speaker will spend half of her short and valuable time profusely praising and thanking her colleagues. They ask: Is this an old American custom? Or do all women in public life demand flattery? They also are mystified as to why American men speakers invariably pay lavish and hackneyed compliments to feminine audiences.

Not only foreign visitors but some American club leaders have been attending conventions as critics this spring. Most of these feel that the convention—feminine gender at least—has made great progress in the last few years. Its delegates and their activities are more streamlined. Participants are dressing more smartly, less fussily. There is less talk of the "two bosom" and "three bosom" corsage. There is far less time wasted in mob teas and reception crushes. Introductions at luncheons have been cut down. The three-minute speaker has at last become a reality.

One criticism made is that there is not enough grass roots education in advance on public problems. In many organizations there is too great a gap in information between national and local leadership. This lack of advance study of topics to be acted on at convention sometimes lead to hasty action under the emotional spell of a speaker.

Also in many conventions there is still too much eating, dressing, concern with trifles, too much indirection. Often in both men's and women's conventions there is too much absorption in the mechanics of meetings and in convention politics. Delegates need, above all, to be inspired and vitalized so they can carry home some embers of convention fire.

Indians' Plea

The American Indian deserves more considered interest by the citizens of the United States. He should not be left to the exploiting State interests, that wish to deny him all rights of citizenship, and shut off from equal opportunity.

If the public were given the story of the plea of the Hopi and Navajo Indians which was recently presented at the House committee meetings, in which they asked for opportunity to make themselves self-supporting through learning trades and skills in order to equip themselves to take their place on an equal footing with their white brothers, I am confident that the United States citizens would respond generously. They crave educational facilities, which they sadly lack.

The Indians have not the inferiority of mendicants. They would build themselves to be independent, industrious citizens.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Reorganization Fraud

THE PRESIDENT has done well to give the Congress a sort of tickler, in his statement urging quick action on Government reorganization. The truth is that all the ponderous labors of the Hoover Commission are perilously likely to produce no more result than the fruitless efforts to reorganize the Government in the Roosevelt years.

Several bills are before Congress, ranging in character from the second defense unification bill to the bills raising the shockingly low salaries of higher officials, and giving the Government decent housekeeping services. The heart of the whole program, however, is the measure granting the President general powers to bring order out of the chaos of the whole executive branch.

And this heart has, so to speak, already had a dagger driven through it in the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures.

The hand that held the dagger was the hand of Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas, a pleasant-mannered country lawyer who would have felt more at home in the administration of James K. Polk. He gutted the bill by a simple system. He attached an amendment providing that anything the President does to make the executive branch more efficient, may be disapproved by either the Senate or the House within 60 days.

As a practical matter, this provision simply means that the President will be debarred from doing any of the really difficult and important parts of the job. For there is hardly any administrative agency worthy of the name that cannot muster the votes to preserve itself in at least one chamber of Congress. Patronage, plus pork, plus local interest, plus the seniority system in congressional committees, make this certain. In its present form, in short, the general reorganization bill is a fraud.

CONSIDERING past history, it is not surprising that the principal agency Senator McClellan is seeking to protect, at the expense of all hope of effective Government reorganization, should be the Army Engineers. Arkansas is one of the States where the Engineers wield great political power, owing to the local importance of flood control. As a member of the Hoover Commission, Senator McClellan joined former Representative Carter Manasco in a hard fight to have the Hoover group recognize the Army Engineers' sacrosanct status.

Since Senator McClellan failed on the Hoover Commission, the Engineers have been working overtime to protect themselves in Congress. Their instrument has been their special lobby, the Rivers and Harbors Congress. This group, in which interested contractors, representatives of interested States, and the private power companies join to serve their Army friends, is about as mean, powerful and three-cornered a lobbying organization as exists in Washington. The congress may now be said to have triumphed in Senator McClellan's committee.

It must be added that this is by no means the first occasion when this theoretically subordinate corps of Army officers has ventured to attack avowed White House policy. The long-famous Pick-Sloan plan for the Missouri Valley bears the name of the present Chief of Army Engineers. It is, essentially, a plan to safeguard the Army Engineers' field of operations there by blocking the Missouri Valley Authority. Incidentally, it safeguards the private power interests too.

THE PROPOSED Columbia Valley Administration has just received a similar check, by an agreement between the Engineers and the also interested Bureau of Reclamation. Both MVA and CVA are projects ponsored by the President. Altogether, it would seem to be time to find out whether the Engineers are playing on the President's governmental team.

These facts are relevant because they illustrate the kind of problem that must be solved by effective Government reorganization. The time has passed when we can afford a Government which is a mere haphazard congeries of agencies speaking for special interests.

To be sure, even the Hoover Commission reports do not provide for complete modernization of our crazy, antiquated governmental structure. No adequate stepts have been proposed to provide the Government with competent, fully professional staff Yet this Government of clerks cannot go on forever. Again, the job of underpinning the Presidency with an adequate secretariat has been left to the Budget Bureau. Pork-hungry members of Congress, angered by Budget Bureau economies, have just cut the bureau's appropriations by $300,000. Yet the President himself cannot do his job without a reasonable secretariat.

On the other hand, the proposals of the Hoover Commission represent a strong ray of light on a very dark horizon. They are a test for Congress.

If Congress will not let the President at least begin to put the executive house in order, Congress will have no grounds for denouncing wastefulness or any other executive failing.

Favorable Committee Vote On FEPC Foreseen by Powell

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Hope that for the first time in the history of this country a House committee would indorse a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission was voiced yesterday by Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.).

Powell, chairman of a House Labor subcommittee which opened hearings yesterday on the most controversial point of President Truman's Civil Rights program—FEPC—told reporters he was sanguine about indorsement of the bill by the full committee.

Passage by the whole House, however, he said, was quite a different matter. He said he could not predict what would be done if the bill reaches the floor.

The bill before the subcommittee, prohibiting discrimination because of race, religion, color, national origin or ancestry, would affect employers of 50 or more persons whose operations affect interstate or foreign commerce. Labor organizations whose practices affect interstate commerce would be included, but religious, charitable, fraternal, social, educational and sectarian nonprofit corporations are excluded.

Yesterday's hearing, the first of a scheduled three weeks program, was devoted to pros and cons from members of Congress.

Representatives Laurie C. Battle (D., Ala.) and Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.) testified against the measure.

Battle declared that if the law were enacted "pandemonium would break loose." There would be "terrific" claims of discrimination were such a law put on the books, he said.

Bennett also referred to the "litigation" which would result. He said people who simply were unable to get along with other people on a job would claim "discrimination."

Representative Isidore Dollinger (D., N. Y.), testifying for the bill, said discrimination has "brought shame to this nation." Its results, he declared, "are tragic."

Representative John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.) said enactment of the legislation would assure that the "principles and traditions" of American society would become "a living reality" for minority members of that society.

Representative Charles R. Howell (D., N. J.) said New Jersey's FEPC law had worked out well, and that employers had not complained of being imposed upon.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) argued against the bill on the ground that it is "unconstitutional" in that it would deprive employers of their right to decide whom they will hire.

By and large the people of West Virginia would not resist creation of a permanent FEPC, Representative M. G. Burnside (D., W. Va.) told the subcommittee.

Hearing on Poll Tax

Meanwhile before a House Administration subcommittee other witnesses argued on behalf of another point in the President's civil rights program—abolition of the poll tax.

Speaking for Americans for Democratic Action, Moss A. Plunkett of Roanoke, Va., a candidate for the Democratic nomination as attorney general of Virginia, urged the tax be federally forbidden. He termed it "dollar disfranchisement."

At the same hearing, Representative Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) described the "political machine" in Virginia as "vicious."

"I could never bring myself to live in a state that was run by as vicious a political machine as runs Virginia," he said during a House Administration subcommittee hearing on anti-poll tax legislation.

Representative Errett P. Scrivner (R., Kans.) urged passage of anti-poll-tax legislation on the ground that "citizens of the United States should have the right to vote for elective Federal officials."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Victory For Public Power

EVERY TIME the Truman program receives a setback in Congress whoops of joy go up from the various and assorted interests, political and economic that would like to see the whole thing stopped dead. The somewhat premature rejoicing over the Administration defeat on a new labor law is still echoing.

Childs

There is one issue, however, on which the Democrats have held an almost unbroken line in spite of powerful and persistent lobbying. That is on public power and public ownership of transmission lines from the Government's great power projects.

In the campaign last fall this was one of President Truman's most emphatic challenges—especially in the West, where the power shortage directly touches the lives of millions. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's evasiveness on this issue is believed to have cost him many votes.

Shortly, the Senate will consider a request from the Department of the Interior for funds to build transmission lines in the Northwest and the Southwest. The $3,570,000 for transmission lines linking the Bonneville power system in Washington and Oregon with the Hungry Horse Dam in Montana precipitated a brief but sharp encounter in the House.

That stout defender of the private utilities, Representative Ben Jensen of Iowa, sought to knock out this appropriation. The entire utility lobby, spaiked by the Montana Power Co. and Purcell Smith, highly paid lobbyist for the industry, went into action.

CHIEF BATTLER for the transmission lines was Representative Mike Mansfield of Montana. In a vigorous speech Mansfield pointed out how essential the added power was to develop basic industries in his State and provide power for rural electrification. He showed that by interconnecting these great Western dams it would be possible to produce at least three times the volume of power that could be produced if they remained as isolated units.

The vote in favor of keeping the money to build the transmission lines in the bill was 146 to 56. Not a single Democrat voted against the publicly owned transmission lines.

Opposition to public transmission lines in the Southwest was not pushed so far. While private utility witnesses testified in committee against the Southwest project, it was not fought out on the floor.

One very good reason was Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas. The Southwest Power Administration covering Arkansas, Louisiana and parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, is Rayburn's pride and joy.

Attempts in the past to short-circuit Southwest power development have met with Rayburn's adamant opposition. He is a shrewd and resourceful opponent with wide popularity in the House.

Because of his consistent support of public power, the utilities some years ago went all out for a rival candidate in Rayburn's district in Texas. But about all they accomplished was to confirm the Speaker in his strong feelings about the power lobby.

DURING the controversy in the House one curious angle came to light. It developed that William Boyle, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, had written a letter to the Department of the Interior in behalf of 11 private power companies in the Southwest, suggesting that negotiations be pushed between private and public power interests that would preserve the rights and territories of each.

The department is believed to have referred the letter in routine to the Southwest Power Administration for a reply. The able administrator of Southwest is Douglas G. Wright, who is a close friend of Rayburn.

Advocates of public power in the Southwest got word of the Boyle letter and saw that it was brought to the Speaker's attention. Rayburn, whose emotional boiling point is low, is said to have taken an angry protest to the White House. At about this time Boyle's connection with the Southwest power companies was ended. But not long afterward the President decided that the executive director of the Democratic Committee should be a full-time paid employe with no private law business on the side.

THE EIGHTIETH CONGRESS turned down a request from the Tennessee Valley Authority for funds to start construction of a standby steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn. Both Houses in the present Congress have now approved the steam plant, which figured in the last presidential campaign. Here is an instance where the clearly expressed will of the voters is translated into action.

Pepco's New Issues Clear Last Hurdle

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Securities and Exchange Commission flashed the green light late yesterday and two underwriting groups started the wheels rolling to raise more than 17 million dollars in new capital for the Potomac Electric Power Co.

On the issue of 592,250 shares of new common stock, the Chemical Bank of New York as Pepco transfer agents started mailing out prospectuses last night to all present shareholders. The new shares will be offered first to old stockholders at $12.50 a share, well below the $13.75 market price yesterday.

Warrants will be mailed to all stockholders of record May 10, entitling them to buy one new share for each five shares held as of yesterday. The "rights" will expire on May 25 at 3 p. m. If a stockholder doesn't care to exercise his "rights," local investment brokers are prepared to buy the warrants.

A syndicate, headed by Dillon, Read & Co., Inc. of New York and including nine Washington investment houses, will buy any portion of the new stock not subscribed by old stockholders. Proceeds of the stock issue are expected to approximate $7,200,000.

Also to be offered publicly today is a 10-million-dollar issue of Pepco first mortgage bonds. Price will be 101½ and the yield to investors will be 2.805 per cent to maturity in 1984. A group headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., of Chicago is the underwriter.

Back of the two security offerings is a lengthy and complicated story involving sweat, headaches, unexpected barriers and surprise developments.

Already related as they unfolded were the PUC's unexpected disapproval of Pepco's original 37-million-dollar financing plan, the drafting of a new plan, the surprise intervention of Otis & Co. of Cleveland to insist on competitive bidding, the last-minute attempt of the same Cleveland firm to upset the apple cart by offering "bargain" fees and then reneging on its offer.

PEPCO DIVIDENDS: Regular quarterly dividends on Potomac Electric Power Co. issues have been declared as follows: Twenty-two and one half cents a share on common and 45 cents a share on both classes of preferred stock. Record date for all is June 6, while payable dates are June 30 for common and July 1 for preferred. The new issue of 592,250 shares of common, which will be offered first to old stockholders on a 1-for-5 basis, will be eligible for the June dividend.

HEADS COMMITTEE: Maury Nee of Washington has been elected chairman of the Commerce Department's retail advisory committee. Composed of representatives of 85 types of retail trades, the committee serves as advisers to Secretary of Commerce Sawyer. Nee is treasurer of the P. J. Nee Co., Washington furniture store, and also is first vice president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of this city. Nee said yesterday that he plans to appoint an executive committee to serve with him in correlating information for the consumption of the Commerce Department.

Steel Executives Are Fallible, But So Is Bean, Their Gadfly

By J. A. Livingston

GRANDPA refilled my glass, offered me another cigarette, and continued his monologue: "Now I have a lot of sympathy for guys like Louis H. Bean. People make fun of him. Say he should stick to fertilizer, instead of predicting elections or estimating the Nation's steel needs. Well, I don't see anything wrong with an economist in the Department of Agriculture flexing his brains."

Livington

Grandpa went on: "They used to make fun of J. P. Morgan, too, when he went art collecting. Said a banker should stick to his bonds. But before he got through, Morgan learned a lot about art. And the paintings he bought are now an American heritage."

"No," continued grandpa, patting are arm of his chair, "give me the mind that runs afield. I think that's particularly important in the steel industry; steel men think too much alike. A man like Bean makes men like Ben Fairless, or Gene Grace, or Charlie White kick up their minds. Just before and during the war, steel men were sure they had plenty of capacity. The Government had to spur them to expand, even had to build plants.

"But because steel men were wrong then doesn't mean they're always wrong, or that Bean's an expert in forecasting future steel demand. Bean's fallible too. He missed picking Truman in the presidential election, despite all the trend lines in his book, 'How to Predict Elections.' So how can he be so plumb sure that we have to add another 10 per cent to 15 per cent to our steel capacity?"

I FINALLY got a word in: "I know exactly what you mean," I said. "I talked to Bean, and he said 'I would not expect Mr. Fairless, of U. S. Steel, to perform a multiple curvilinear correlation analysis which is technically required to determine what level of steel capacity is normal for full employment any more than I would expect Mr. Fairless to come to me to tell him how best to combine capital, labor, or management to produce steel.'"

Grandpa was gradually pitching his voice higher. "That's the trouble with planners. They're sure that nobody can plan but themselves. Bean ought to know that the steel corporations have researchers trying to figure out future needs for steel. They want as much business as they can get. So they want to have the capacity. But they want their investment to pay out. They're going to be conservative therefore. And when Bean sends up a howl for additional capacity, he gives them a prod.

"But when he holds himself and the Government up as godamighty, well, he loses my vote. Fact is, I like decentralized planning. Fairless is figuring what he ought to do for U. S. Steel; Grace is figuring how he can outsmart Fairless and put Bethlehem on top; White is trying to muscle in with his own plans for Republic. And so it goes.

"Bean should recognize that steel capacity is partly dictated by competitive relationships. You can't put that on a chart. It's dictated by market shifts, also not easily charted. And partly by population and consumption trends, which are chartable. A man sitting in Washington, without trial and error practical experience, can't have a rounded understanding of what goes into determining whether to make a quarter or half a billion dollar new investment. He doesn't have the responsibility either."

GRANDPA DRAINED his glass, poured another, and continued with finality: "You know, in our society we don't recognize the value of doing things by bits and pieces. One of the great advantages of having planning by individual companies is that they're not always all doing the same thing at the same time. That's a safeguard.

"I'm not afraid of not having steel capacity—ultimately. Some companies will be a bit ahead, some behind. The big mistake, when the demand is sliding off, would be to build capacity just because a chart says so.

"Overexpansion at the top of a boom is a greater peril than not expanding before a rise. If I were an executive, I'd test out this market, see how firm it is underneath. In our society, that's the function of competition, and of management. If Bean had his way, why there'd be no need for more than one great big steel company. One planner, after a battle with his calculating machine, would say what should be done."

Grandpa then closed his eyes. And the subject.

Army Upheld In Arresting Ex-Employe

San Antonio, Tex., May 10 (AP).—U. S. District Judge Ben H. Rice jr., has ruled the Army has jurisdiction over a civilian having no connection with the armed forces at the time of arrest.

His decision was made yesterday in the case of James W. Mobley, Houston liquor store owner, who had been charged in Frankfurt, Germany, with misappropriating cigarette coupons and using them as money.

Mobley was an employe of the Army post exchange in Frankfurt when charged with violation of the 96th Article of War, August 5, 1948.

He was arrested in Houston on December 20, 1948, after leaving Europe by plane while the charges still were on file at Frankfurt.

Mobley contended he was discharged from the Army's employment about November 1, 1948.

Judge Rice ruled the Army had jurisdiction over Mobley at the time of an original charge and confinement in Frankfurt, and that circumstances since then have not changed the jurisdiction.

Mobley has been held in the Fort Sam Houston stockade since last December. Rice, in his decision, denied a writ of habeas corpus.

the State. Pennsylvania orchards have a heavy bloom reported for all varieties in all commercial areas."

Peach Crop Also Short

Another short crop of peaches was reported for the Southern States. "In Virginia," the estimate said, "March and April frosts and freezes killed many peach buds but there appears to be enough fruit set to make a good-sized crop in most areas. The principal commerical counties, Nelson and Rockingham, seem to have suffered the greatest damage.

"In Maryland, the set of peaches is generally heavy."

A remarkable increase in milk production in Virginia was reported. Production in April was estimated at 164 million pounds, contrasted with 155 million a year ago, and 149 million in March. The average for 1938-47 (10 years) was 127 million.

The winter wheat production for Maryland was estimated at 7,503,000 bushels, compared with 6,032,000 last year and 7,128,000 average for 10 years previously.

8-Million Bushel Estimate

Virginia's winter wheat was estimated at 3,824,000 bushels; compared with 9,194,000 least year and an average of 7,904,000.

West Virginia's winter wheat was placed at 1,620,000 bushels against 1,716,000 last year and an average of 1,624,000.

Maryland's production of winter rye was outstanding. While most States reported a decrease, Maryland was shown jumping from 273,000 bushels last year to 784,000 this year. The average was 260,000.

Virginia's rye crop dropped this year to an estimated 405,000 bushels from 480,000 last year, and an average of 495,000.

West Virginia's rye was estimated at only 26,000 bushels, the same as last year, compared with a 60,000-bushel 10-year average.

The report estimated Virginia's tobacco crop last year to have brought its growers 68 million dollars, compared with 60 million the year before. West Virginia's tobacco crop was worth $1,846,000 compared with $1,488,000 in 1947.

Protestants Plan National Weekly Paper

Kansas City, May 10 (AP)—Protestant leaders expressed hope here today they could establish a national Protestant weekly newspaper, representing all denominations, and have it going by the first of the year.

A three-day planning conference opened here tonight for the launching of the newspaper, the first of its kind.

Dr. Robert W. Searle, director of community relations of the Protestant Council of New York City and chairman of the planning committee for the newspaper, predicted the newspaper would have a half-million circulation within six months. Dr. Searle said the newspaper venture might be considered a two-million-dollar project.

Superb Quality — And More Tea per Bag
"SALADA" TEA-BAGS

This is called a "pie chart." You don't need to look twice to know why. This pie chart shows what happened to the money Alcoa took in last year. You just compare the size of the cuts.

Look at Alcoa's pie for 1948

Alcoans—more than 40,000 of us—received 37.14¢ out of each dollar taken in. The total amount of money paid for wages, salaries and employe benefits in 1948 was the largest in the Company's peace-time history. We paid out 43.55¢ for materials and services bought, 7.48¢ for taxes (over 45% of total earnings), and held 2.74¢ for depreciation. We also put 6.30¢ back into the business for expansion and other things that help guarantee the future of Alcoa, and help make Alcoans' jobs and futures more secure. This left 2.79¢ out of each income dollar for shareholders—the people who furnish the money for tools, buildings, raw materials and equipment.

Would you like to know why this pie is like one that mother might bake?

WE'LL TELL YOU

Down in the corner is a recipe for a berry pie. Try it at home. It's good! This recipe makes a 9-inch pie that cuts in five generous pieces.

If you increase everything, you can make a 10-inch pie. Then you get six pieces. Each is a little narrower—but you get more berries in each piece.

In America, thank goodness, a business pie is just like a berry pie. The more we all put into it, the bigger it gets. And each piece will have more "berries" in it. They are the "berries" you can spend for things you want—for things that make life pleasant.

American workers get more "berries" in their slice of business's pie than any other workers. That's why we Americans have more of the good things than any other people in the world.

Here at Alcoa, most of our money comes from the sale of Alcoa Aluminum. The more aluminum we can make and sell at prices people can afford to pay, the more "berries" go into Alcoa's pie. And that makes more "berries"—or dollars—to divide up, in the American way—a fair share for everyone who puts something into the pie!

BERRY PIE

Flaky pastry
¾—1 cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 cups drained berries
1 tablespoon butter

1. Line 9-inch pie pan with pastry.
2. Mix sugar, flour, salt.
3. Pour berries into pastry shell; sprinkle with sugar mixture.
4. Dot with butter; adjust top crust.
5. Brush top crust with cream or egg white.
6. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 10 minutes, then in moderate oven (350° F.) about 30 minutes.

Montgomery Gets Special School Bill

U. S. Funds Asked

J. E. Hoover School Bills Introduced

Congress was asked yesterday to give Federal cooperation to the J. Edgar Hoover Foundation in setting up a 10-million-dollar model school for delinquent boys on a 530-acre tract near Seneca, Md.

The proposal was contained in bills presented to the House by Representative Walter (D., Pa.) and to the Senate jointly by Senators Eibert Thomas (D., Utah), Morse (R., Oreg.) and Ives (R., N. Y.).

Senator Thomas told the Senate he was introducing the bill in tribute to Hoover for his 25 years of "fair, fearless and efficient service" in his job as FBI director.

He said the school proposal was advanced by various friends and admirers of Hoover.

The bill calls for the Federal Government to receive the Seneca tract as a gift, and to contribute five million dollars to build the school there. The Government money would be granted when an equal amount had been raised by private contributions to maintain and operate the school.

Legislation for emergency construction of 50 classrooms costing $980,000 at eight Montgomery County schools was introduced yesterday at a legislative session of the Montgomery County Council.

The measure calls for a $735,000 bond issue. Sponsored by Mrs. Ralph E. Himstead, a council member, it is designed to speed up contract awards on urgently needed construction pending a final decision on the five-million-dollar major school building program for next year.

The council, in executive session, also approved a $295,399 interim appropriation from surplus funds for miscellaneous purposes, such as debt service, lateral roads, sewer and water installations at Sligo Park Veterans Housing Project, and hospitalization of indigents.

Forty of the proposed classrooms would be financed by the $735,000 in bonds authorized by the bill. The remaining ten would be paid for by a possible grant of $245,000 in State matching funds.

According to school officials, the classrooms would be at the following elementary schools: Somerset, four; Oak View, four; Viers Mill Village, eight; East-West Highway, eight; East Rockville, eight; Homewood, eight.

If the $245,000 State grant is forthcoming, eight additional classrooms would be built at Rolling Terrace Elementary, and two at Alta Vista Elementary.

Other bills introduced yesterday swould: (1) Provide for adoption of building, fire, electrical and other codes; (2) abolish the dual police system in Takoma Park and require the county to give the community a tax rebate in lieu of police protection; (3) establish a county-wide library system; (4) provide for a Kensington library area; (5) provide for a Rockville library area, and (6) set up a Damascus fire-taxing area.

Prince Georges Details Cuts For Schools

Items to be cut from the Prince Georges County school budget to meet the $330,000 slash ordered in the levy were decided upon yesterday by the Prince Georges County commissioners.

The cuts were ordered by the commissioners after consultation with the county board of education.

Largest single cut is $127,227 for materials of instruction, including library books and the annual workshop at which teachers prepare the curriculum.

Next largest cut was $43,400 to be saved by dismissing clerks from all of the county schools.

Third largest was $32,000 to be saved by reducing the teaching staff at Riverdale, Center and North End at Greenbelt and at Berwyn, Laurel, Seat Pleasant, Suitland, Bradbury Heights, Oxon Hill, Ager Road, J. Enos Ray, Capitol Heights, Mount Rainier and Fairmount Heights Schools.

Principals to Teach

In these schools, it was decided, principals will be required to teach.

Reduction in salaries of janitors, helpers, janitors' supplies and fuel will save another $39,420, while $23,000 was ordered cut in school plant maintenance and $12,300 in repair and replacement of equipment.

Elimination of a proposed county schools dental clinics and of proposed school lunch equipment at Lyndon Hall, Hyattsville Elementary, Suitland, Seat Pleasant, Greenbelt High, Mt. Rainier High, Bradbury Heights, Maryland Park, J. Enos Ray, Mt. Rainier Elementary, Bladensburg High, Hyattsville High, Berwyn, Brooks Road and several other schools will provide another $5076 saving. Adult education funds will be cut $200.

Elimination of capital outlay items to save $132,795 was also directed.

The board of education members told the commissioners that all of the items are essential but would cause the least loss to educational requirements.

At its own meeting, the board of education ordered bids for four classrooms and multipurpose room with kitchen, infirmary, teachers room and sanitary facilities for District Heights School, and for Ager Road Elementary School and for additions to Suitland Elementary School and Oxon Hill Negro School. The board approved plans for renovating Lincoln Negro Elementary School.

In reorganization of the board, J. Frank Dent of Clinton, president, and Mrs. H. Edna Pitts, Cottage City, vice president, were reelected.

Race Ban Ends For 2 Areas

other playground areas now run by the Recreation Board on Federal land. The department is now gathering information on cost of operation, staff needs and other problems.

These areas are Montrose Park in Georgetown, Anacostia Park playground and two day camps in Rock Creek Park. Montrose and Anacostia playgrounds now are white. One of the day camps is white, the other Negro.

The Interior Department had been demanding that the Recreation Board operate all its facilities on a nonsegregated basis.

Two members of the Recreation Board, James M. Schwab and Mrs. Andrew Saul, criticized Wender for releasing the report to the press before submitting it to the board's by-laws committee which is considering the segregated playground issue.

Mrs. Saul said she had been "treated with indignity" because she received the report less than 24 hours before it appeared in last Sunday's newspapers.

Wender said he was "deeply sorry" but proceeded to rule that the recreation superintendent now could issue permits for nonsegregated after-school meetings, a conclusion reached in the report.

Schwab Objects

Schwab objected and moved to continue the present segregated pattern indefinitely. Wender compromised by agreeing to continue it for a month and the four members still present at this time all agreed.

On the issue of ending segregation at all the board's play areas, Mrs. Alice E. Hunter and Root indicated they favored immediate action. Wender pointed out this would require a by-law change, necessitating public notice to members a week before a regular meeting.

Later, Mrs. Hunter indicated she will raise the issue next month. She said numerous groups will appeal to the District Commissioners to instruct their representative on the board, District Budget Director Walter Fowler, to vote to end segregation. Fowler was the only member absent yesterday.

Even if Mrs. Hunter, Root and Fowler were to vote to end all segregation, a fourth vote would be necessary for a majority. Schwab and Mrs. Saul have indicated they would oppose such a move. Albert E. Steinem, the Board of Education's new representative on the Recreation Board, probably will be instructed by the school officials at their next meeting.

In his report last Sunday, Wender said he intends to prepare a second report on playground segregation. It may take some time to complete, he said.

Meanwhile, the by-laws committee, headed by Schwab, is expected to consider the issue, but Schwab yesterday avoided Mrs. Hunter's efforts to have him promise a recommendation for the June meeting to consider. Wender said the meeting could act without a recommendation.

During 1942-43 he served as assistant director of the Office of War Information. From 1944 until the end of the war, MacLeish was Assistant Secretary of State.

He won the Pulitzer Poetry Prize in 1933 with the "Conquistador."

Anti-Vivisectionists Press Fight on 3 Bills

The District Anti-Vivisection Society has opened legislative headquarters in Room 165 of the Hotel Raleigh to work to defeat three animal experimentation bills now before Congress, according to Mrs. Alma T. Opal, president of the society.

The Miller bills, H. R. 4238 and H. R. 4349, and the McGrath bill, S. 1703, would allow the District pound to release unclaimed animals for medical experimentation, after holding the animals at least 48 hours.

Malmedy Convictions Hit

By the United Press

Col. John S. Dwinnell, who defended Nazi stormtroopers accused of the Malmedy massacre, said yesterday the Nazis were convicted on the basis of "preposterous and incredible confessions."

Testifying for the second day before a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee, Dwinell said the confession of one German named Joachim Hoffman had such impossibly minute details that it was jokingly called "the tales of Hoffman."

The subcommittee is considering charges that U. S. army agents used third-degree methods to force confessions from Nazis accused of machine-gunning upwards of 80 American prisoners of war in a field near Malmedy, Belgium, in 1944.

Dwinell, a Brooklyn, N. Y., lawyer, said a U. S. Army court took only 2 hours and 20 minutes to find all 73 accused Nazis guilty, or one-and-one-half minutes per man. He said the court tried to be fair but was not. He blamed the "psychology of the time."

The defense attorney also said that Joachim Pieper, commander of the first SS Panzer division, which staged the killing, begged for death after being kept for two years in solitary confinement.

Prince Georges Defeats Enlarged Hospital

Despite the pleas of 20 citizens, including 15 county doctors, the Prince Georges County Commissioners voted 3-2 yesterday against enlarging the Prince Georges Hospital at Cheverly, Md.

The delegation, made up of members of the board of directors of the hospital and doctors, urged that the county take advantage of a $421,000 grant by the Federal Government toward the hospital additions, which would require sale of $800,000 in bonds by the county.

The doctors said the county now has no facilities for Negro patients nor for contagious diseases and that growth of the county and the prepayment medical care program proposed by the doctors of the county would require additional beds.

Commissioners Leonard Dyer and Harry W. McNamee voted in favor of the program which also would provide health department headquarters and clinic facilities.

The commissioners, in other actions, voted to require all county employes to take a loyalty oath stating that they are not members of any group advocating overthrow of the Government of the United States or of the State of Maryland as provided for in a referendum last November.

They also proclaimed May 15 as "I Am An American Day" and urged that National and State flags be displayed and that civic, patriotic and other groups conduct appropriate exercises.

A delegation from the New Hampshire ave.-East-West Highway area of Takoma Park urged a playground for that area and that the Sligo Creek Parkway be extended into Prince Georges County for the benefit of children of their area. The commissioners voted to recommend to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission that the playground be provided.

Haefner's 1-Hitter Gives Nats 8th, 1-0, Over Tribe

This Morning . . . With Shirley Povich

It's High Time Wolves Gave Our Robertson Boy a Break

CLEVELAND, MAY 10.—Letter to Washington D. C.:

Naturally, Povich doesn't write unless he wants something, and that's the correct assumption this time, too. He's asking a favor, something special—but for another guy.

Pretty soon, a fellow named Sherrard Robertson will be back in your town, playing second base for the Nats. I was thinking you might find it reasonable to do the nice thing for him by stifling some of those boos, and giving the guy a fair shake.

POVICH

All of a sudden, Robertson is nicely squared away and playing great ball for the Nats on the road, but the schedule will bring him back to Griffith Stadium by the end of the week, and that's where he has a hard time.

That's where he's always on the spot because he's Clark Griffith's nephew, and the brother of Vice President Calvin Griffith. That makes him fair game for the grandstand wolves and they've treated him pretty shabbily for three years now, his ears have burned at the insults by the customers.

HOLY SMOKE, a guy can't pick his relatives. An uncle and a brother in the front office is the cross he bears. He's a target, sure enough. And the trouble is, Sherry is no polished performer. He makes errors in the infield. And they're magnified because of those front-office connections. But he can hit.

Joe Kuhel didn't dare to put Robertson in the line-up as long as the team was in Washington. There would be too much pressure on him. But on the road, ah, that was different. And when Kuhel was so desperate he had to sacrifice something for some more power, he moved Robertson in there at second base, and the fellow has been wonderful.

Away from Griffith Stadium, he's loose. In nine games he has made one misplay at second base. He's hit four homers. As of today he was batting .364 and giving the Nats a tremendous lift in their string of wins. Seven of his 12 hits have been for extra bases. At Chicago, at St. Louis and here in Cleveland, the fans can't understand why the Nats kept him out of the line-up early in the year.

A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO, even Clark Griffith gave up on his nephew as an infielder. But he wouldn't give up on Sherry's bat. He was moved to the outfield, but he's back at second base now on account of that nice cut he takes. They used to play him at third and short, but that was a disfavor to him. Second base is his only spot.

In justice to the fellow, Griffith should have traded him a couple of years ago. Detroit was nuts to get Robertson, and made big offers. Steve O'Neill said, "I'd use him at second base and let him shoot for our right field seats." But Griffith held on to his nephew in the long-shot hope that Robertson might still make his own ball club.

It was pure nepotism that raised its handsome head in the season's opener in Washington. Sherry was sent in as a pinch-hitter against the A's in the ninth and doubled to left to launch the two runs needed to beat the A's. On his next appearance as a pinch-hitter, he fouled out. The fans' memories were short, and the boos came.

ROBERTSON HASN'T let on that he's been hearing those Griffith Stadium boos. He's kept his chin up, the upper lip stiff, and been pretty admirable about it. No question about his guts. But it's a relief for him and the club to get on the road. He's just another ballplayer then, and the anonymity is wonderful.

And on this road trip he's been terrific. His homer into the wind in Cleveland the other day was the hardest hit ball of the year here. With his 12 hits, he's driven in eight runs. He runs like a thief and takes extra bases. It's so nice to be loose, and be regarded as a ballplayer instead of the boss' nephew.

So I was just thinking it would be nice if Washington fans would find it in their hearts to give a hard-trying guy a better deal when this road trip ends. Forget his uncle owns the ball club, will ya?

Mickey Tops Gromek on Robinson's Hit in 4th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Cleveland, May 10.—Into the baffled faces of the Cleveland Indians, little Mickey Haefner threw a one-hit pitching performance today and took the Nats to their eighth straight victory.

It was a classic 1-0 triumph, and Haefner was the man of the hour and fifty minutes, winning the game the only way he could—with a shut-out.

Only a single by Larry Doby with one out in the first inning separated Haefner from no-hit fame. He struck out nobody, but he was discombooberating the Indians all day with his assorted junk of screwballs, knucklers and dipsy curves.

The one run the Nats compounded off Steve Gromek in the fourth inning, Haefner made stand up nicely and he got over the big hump in the ninth inning after the Indians put the tying run on with none out.

The Nats' winning hit in the fourth was a single sweet to the feel of Eddie Robinson, traded off the champion Indians to the Nats last winter. It was a clean shot into right field that drove in Sherry Robertson who singled to center and moved up on a pass to Clyde Vollmer.

At the finish, the Indians were screaming murder, contending that Haefner had balked the tying run home in the ninth. In that inning, Haefner hit Doby in the ribs with a pitched ball to start off with, and a sacrifice by Boone moved him to second. Gordon grounded out as Doby took third, then Keltner walked, and Mickey Vernon was at bat when came the argument.

Vernon stepped out of the box on the second pitch, yelling "Balk!" Manager Lou Boudreau rushed to the plate to back him up, claiming Haefner had not come to a pause, before making the delivery. He charged Umpire-in-Chief Joe Paparella as if to lay hands on him. Paparella walked away, giving no satisfaction.

When Vernon eventually grounded out to Robertson, the Indians were licked for the third straight time in the series. They had taken their second straight shutout. They hadn't scored a run against Washington pitching in 20 consecutive innings.

The Nats outhit 'em, seven to one, but only in that fourth inning and the seventh were they able to get a man as far as third base. High winds were discouaging extra-base hits.

Only the first and ninth innings were rough for Haefner. After Doby's single with one out in the opener, Haefner walked Gordon

Longest Streak Since 1912, Griff Thinks

The Nats haven't won eight games in a row for so long that not even their president, Clark Griffith, can remember for certain when they did it.

"I'm pretty sure," he said, "that this is our longest winning streak since 1912 when we won 15 in a row—all of them on the road."

The 1912 Nats were managed by Griffith and finished in second place. That 15-game streak made them the first club in the American League to win every game on a road trip.

Browns Win On Priddy's Homer, 2-1

St. Louis, May 10 (AP).—The lowly St. Louis Browns could muster only three hits today but one of them was a ninth-inning home run by Jerry Priddy that gave the Browns a 2-1 verdict over the Boston Red Sox and snapped their losing streak at 10 straight.

Only 1663 fans were on hand for the pitchers' duel.

One of the other two hits off Charlie Stobbs was a double by Priddy that sent Dick Kokos home with the Brown's other counter, in the third inning.

Red Embree yielded only four safeties, one of them Ted Williams' sixth homer of the year, to get credit for his first victory. He is charged with four defeats.

Priddy's game-winning homer to the right field pavilion roof gave the Browns their first triumph at Sportsman's Park since their opening day victory over Cleveland.

Griff's Pinochle Loses But Ball Club Wins

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

CLARK GRIFFITH'S pinochle parties have become wonderfully and willingly disorganized.

Just because the Nats have a trifling little old eight-game winning streak going, the players are melding the wrong cards, overbidding their hands, forgetting who's supposed to deal and in general paying practically no attention to what's going on.

For years, Griff and a few fast friends have gathered in his office daily to play pinochle and listen to the broadcast of the Nats' road games.

In the past years, the radio was turned low so as not to be able to hear too well what was going on with those blunderous Nats. Today, however, three radios go full blast, shouting out the details of the Nats' latest accomplishments.

"Let the whole dinged neighborhood hear it," bellowed the all-of-a-sudden young again 79-year-old Griff yesterday as Arch McDonald's voice thundered through the room with the news of the 1-0 triumph over Cleveland.

"That club has got the spark now," Griff continued. "Ain't no tellin' what they'll do. Heh, heh, heh. I just gotta laugh when I think of those people who said we didn't have a ball club. Heh, heh, heh."

All during the broadcast yesterday, Griff cavorted around his office like the gay old blade he was years ago. There were three different pinochle games going on and Griff was in all three.

Came the seventh inning, however, he halted 'em all. "Stand up, boys, this is OUR seventh inning." Whereupon every player dropped his cards and took the traditional stretch, same as you and I would do at a ball game.

When Gromek had a 2-0 count on Sherry Robertson, Griff got up off his chair and said "Get a walk, Sherry, 'cause you can steal on this fellow and Vollmer will knock you in."

In the ninth, when the Indians had runners on first and third with two away, Griff inched up closer to the radio and warned Haefner, who was pitching to Vernon:

"Pitch him tight, Mickey. Vernon can't hit those close pitches." And Vernon didn't, either.

The fourth inning, the round the Nats pushed across what proved to be the only run they needed, was both joyous and grievous for Griff. When Eddie Robinson singled Sherry Robertson in, Griff almost leaped through the loudspeaker

A moment later, however, when neither Dente nor Evans could lift a ball out of the infield with the bases loaded, he walked dejectedly away from the radio.

"Consarn it, a little old fly would have brought us another run, consarn it."

He was fidgety, nervous, worried and sweating it out for nine innings, nursing that 1-0 lead perhaps even more than his ball club. But when Vernon grounded out to wind up the game, Griff let out a whoop and a holler which would have done credit to a small gang of college cheer leaders.

"We win again," he shouted a dozen times, soon to be joined in by his cronies who were sweating out the game as much as he was.

"That'll make front-page news in my paper," beamed Henry Tate Rodier, editor of the two-page Washington Bulletin. "Put it on both pages," chuckled Griff.

"I can't get over Vernon making that error in the sixth inning," broke in the happy Eddie Eynon, Nats secretary. "Mickey is still playing for us, it seems."

Surrounded by this joyful group was one soleful-looking person, Dr. Henry Kaufman, Griff's physician.

"Last year we could play pinochle in peace," he mused, but this year's ball club has wrecked our game."

"Yeah, and ain't it wonderful?" interrupted the back-slapping, beaming Griff.

Yanks Knock Newhouser Out, Win, 6-1

Detroit, May 10 (AP).—The New York Yankees combined six timely hits with seven walks today to give Allie Reynolds a 6-1 decision over Hal Newhouser and the Detroit Tigers.

Newhouser, who was knocked from the box for the second time in a row, had a no-hitter going until the last of the fifth when Bill Johnson singled.

The Yankees broke loose for four runs in the top of the ninth to end the 2-1 Newhouser-Reynolds duel in a hurry.

Yogi Berra, Yankee catcher, was hit on the head by a thrown ball during infield practice before the game. He was given first-aid treatment and taken to Ford Hospital where X-rays showed no fracture.

Ballplayer's Leg Amputated In Tragic Climax to Visit Home

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Those bobby-soxers fans of the Louisville Colonels can sorrowfully disband their "Koney Klub."

Handsome, 23-year-old Charley Koney, star second baseman of the Colonels, had his right leg amputated just above the knee last night.

It was the tragic climax to a weekend visit to his parents and 21-year-old wife, who bore Chuck a daughter three weeks ago.

Chuck's dad was proud of a newly installed hot-water heater. He and Chuck went to the basement to look it over. The father threw some refuse into the disconnected old heater and burned it. Steam pressure exploded the tank.

Both of Chuck's legs, his nose and jaw were fractured by the blast. His father was uninjured.

CLEVELAND, MAY 10 (AP).—A hotel detective testified today that after he followed a tall brunette in green slacks to the hotel room of Pitcher Virgil (Fire) Trucks, the Detroit hurler clipped him on the chin.

Detective Albert F. Schmidt gave the testimony before a jury in a $32,500 suit against Trucks. The suit was filed by Charles F. Heidler, night manager of the Hotel Statler. Heidler claimed Trucks beat him in the hotel corridor at 4:30 a.m. September 20, 1946.

THREE LOCAL collegians were named on the National Rifle Association's All-America rifle team yesterday and another was placed on the second team. Maryland's Arthur Cook, Olympic and National champ; George Washington's Woodward G. Eicke and Georgetown's Henry D. Cross gained top honors. Thomas L. Taylor, Maryland, made the second team.

Portsmouth Coach Moves To G. W. High

Phes Woodson last night was named head football coach at George Washington High of Alexandria. He succeeds Paul (Bus) Mackey, who resigned two weeks ago.

A former three-letter athlete at Randolph-Macon College, the 6 foot, 5 inch, 240-pound Woodson has been coaching for the last three years at Woodrow Wilson High in Portsmouth, Va. Previously, Woodson had coached two John Marshall of Richmond teams to Virginia football titles.

Last year's G. W. High team won eight games, lost one and tied two. Woodson's Portsmouth team won four and lost five last season.

Those Unusual Cleveland Fans Get a Break

Cleveland, May 10.—President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians made the grand gesture today as 6208 Cleveland fans turned out for the finale of the Washington series despite 48-degree temperature and a chill wind.

Over the public address system, the public relations-minded Veeck announced in the fifth inning: "You fans who came to see the Indians play today despite the cold and the wind are our most loyal fans Please keep your rain checks and they will be honored at any future game." POVICH.

Macks Blank Chisox, 5 to 0

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics blended three scattered singles with 11 bases on balls to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 5-0, before 9361 persons here tonight in the first Comiskey Park night game of the new season.

Joe Coleman pitched the distance on a yield of five hits to gain his second victory against three losses as the A's scored all their runs in two innings—a two-run third and three-run eighth.

Story Book Career Ended By Cancer

St. Louis, May 10 (U.P.).—Sam Breadon, a 72-year-old gentleman who lifted the St. Louis Cardinals to baseball's heights, died of cancer today at St. John's Hospital.

Breadon was president of the Cardinals from 1920 until he sold the team to Robert E. Hannegan and Fred M. Saigh, jr., the present owner, on November 26, 1947, when his health began to fail.

Breadon's climb to success was a saga of thrift, shrewdness and industry. He was a struggling mechanic, fresh from his native New York, when he started his career at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904.

Started With Popcorn

He gambled his earnings on popcorn, sold at the fair. With that stake, he became one of the city's leading automobile dealers. In 1917 he invested $200 in the pitifully weak Cardinals.

Soon he added $2000 to his investment, more as a matter of civic pride than because of an interest in the game. And when it appeared his investment might be lost, he stepped in and took over the club. He regarded baseball as a business which he could best manage in person.

The Cardinals, under Breadon, won nine National League pennants and captured the World Series six times.

Sullivan Given Sports Award

By Roger Wolbarst

Hanover, N. H., May 10.—Joseph Sullivan, Georgetown University backfield coach, received the Dartmouth Cup athletic award at ceremonies here tonight.

The 21-year-old Sullivan, who recently joined the Hoya staff as one of the youngest major-college assistant coaches in the nation, completed a brilliant career.

The Indians' leading ground gainer in 1948, Sullivan won four letters in football and three in basketball at Dartmouth. He was a member of the East team in the Shrine game in San Francisco on New Year's Day and was awarded the George Lowe trophy by the Gridiron Club of Boston as New England's outstanding football player last fall.

The Dartmouth cup is awarded annually to the senior class athlete, who by his conduct on and off the playing field, reflects the greatest good on Dartmouth College.

Boysen Freed On Charge of Purse Theft

New York, May 10 (AP).—Fred Boysen was freed today of a robbery charge filed against him after he withdrew an assault complaint he had made against Leo Durocher, manager of the Giants baseball team.

Magistrate Samuel Orr in felony court dismissed the complaint filed by Mrs. Mary Ryan, 49, Negro nurse, on the ground that her story was "a figment of her imagination induced by newspaper publicity."

Mrs. Ryan said she identified Boysen, 24, a Puerto Rican, from his pictures published after he charged that Durocher attacked him at the Polo Grounds April 28.

City to Welcome Our Nats Home

Washington is going to have a homecoming for those wondrous Nats Friday.

Arch McDonald, sports director of WTOP, The Washington Post station, started the ball rolling for the event yesterday with an announcement after his broadcast of the ball game.

A special committee to handle details will meet at the ball park at noon today to map plans for the event. The club arrives at Union Station from Detroit at 9:25 a. m. Friday.

Charles Stoffberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said schools will not be dismissed for the day "but I wouldn't be surprised if some of the boys played hookey."

Stadium Bouts Postponed Again

Heavyweights Pat Comiskey and Elkins Brothers hope to be able to trade punches finally tonight at Griffith Stadium. Their scheduled 10-rounder was postponed because of rain last night for the second successive time.

Comiskey, who weighed in at 218½, has a 31-pound pull on Brothers. Lee Savold will help Manager Bill Daly and Trainer Ray Arcel handle Comiskey at ringside at 8:45 o'clock tonight.

The rest of the card remains the same. In the 10-round semiwind-up, Middleweight Joe Blackwood faces 21-year-old Roger Muriel. Roland Randall, National Golden Gloves middleweight champ, turns pro against Julian Keene in a five-heat event.

Those Wondrous Nats

IF THE CLEVELAND Indians are world's champions, what does that make us?

We've licked 'em three in a row, belted out their best left-hander, Gene Bearden, and shut out their "great" wrecking crew for 20 straight innings.

What does Mr. Griffith mean when he says, "We're a first division team, but I don't know about the pennant?" Maybe he doesn't know our strength.

Geez, I was glad to see Sherry Robertson and Mickey Haefner pull us through yesterday. Those two guys especially.

Sherry's sensational hitting gives our eight-game winning streak a real hometown flavor. You know, of course, that he grew up here. And the folks around Petworth remember well that long ball he used to hit for Roosevelt High not very long ago.

He's been getting some timely hits for our Nats these days. When we needed a run against the Indians the other day, Sherry hit a single, went to second on a wild pitch and came home on Sam Dente's hit. Later in the same game, he hit a 380-foot homer. We won that game, 2-0.

Yesterday when we needed a run, Sherry socked another single and later came around on Eddie Robinson's single. We won that one, 1-0.

And that Haefner. Last year, he lost three games to Cleveland. Two of them were by one run. And in the other, Mickey pitched 14 innings of shutout ball only to lose, 3-0 in the fifteenth. All those games were against The Great Bob Feller.

I betcha Feller's glad he wasn't in there yesterday.

Silver Spring Jockey Runs Total to 8

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico Race Track, Md., May 10.—They laughed when Carson Kirk rode through the Charles Town stretch some 10 years ago looking more like an animated pretzel than a jockey. But they cried today, if they didn't bet on him.

The Silver Spring, Md., boy scheduled to ride Sun Bahram in next Saturday's Preakness, continued to show the finesse he has acquired in recent years by winning four races on the Tuesday program and go far out in the lead in the saddle competition here with eight winners in four days.

Carson, known to his intimates as "Sammy," rode three of today's quartet in a row, the second of the cluster being aboard E. A. Nicodemus' Laran in the $7500 added Baltimore Spring handicap. The day's feature race.

In booting home Laran, a three-time winner, Kirk had daylight to spare between his mount and Christiana Stable's Mark Up. Third money in the test of 6 furlongs went to R. E. Carter's Snowflares in the field of seven.

Laran, coupled with Binky B as the Trainer F. A. Bonsal entry, returned a $6.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:12 1/5, good time over the track deep in slop as the result of the rainy season that set in here yesterday.

In the previous event, Kirk came through with the Highground Stable's Hy. The filly, short on name but long on ability, led C. M. Humphrey's Cubbing and King Ranch's favored Undercurrent into the wire. Hy paid a healthy $18.80.

In the seventh race, Kirk was successful with another Highground Stable representative, American Wolf. The 10-year-old carried 124 pounds but despite the high assignment Kirk got him home as a $5.20 favorite with Kee-Dee Stable's Pango-Pango second and J. A. McKenna's Zoriel third.

Kirk's first success of the day came in the second race. He drove W. Y. Goldsborough's Hobie-B into the wire to take a photo decision to the tune of a $20.40 mutuel. This victory put the finishing touches on a $261.20 daily double payoff which began when Mrs. H. R. Ryan's Balliol took the first race at $35. Kirk, incidentally, was second in this test.

Carson was out of the pay circle only once during the day, that aboard C. P. Brockoff's Tufton in the fourth race.

Kirk, like Ponder, has come a long way.

Larger U. S. Employe Travel Allowance Approved by House

The House passed by a voice vote and sent to the Senate yesterday the Karsten bill to (1) raise the travel allowance for Federal workers from $6 to a maximum of $9, and (2) boost the rate for private car use from 5 to 7 cents a mile.

Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) was the only member flatly to oppose the bill. He said Federal workers took the jobs with their eyes open; that they only work 220 days a year; and that there were five people to take every Government job.

A score of members took the floor to urge enactment of the bill as "simple justice" to employes ordered to travel. Among them were Karsten (D., Mo.), Huber (D., Ohio), Keefe (R., Wis.), Wagner (D., Ohio) and Pfeiffer (R., N. Y.). Tauriello (D., N. Y.) said the $9 allowance was inadequate. He urged it be raised to $12.

Rich (R., Pa.), who supported the bill, took occasion to oppose a measure that would permit Federal workers to retire at 55 after 30 years of service. Lanham (D., Ala.) served notice that he would push legislation to outlaw payment of dues and fees by Government to 1000 organizations for the benefit of employes. Hardy (D., Va.) promised that his subcommittee of the Expenditures Committee would look into charges that travel by employes is abused.

Karsten and other members explained that the average employe who travels now must dig into his pocket to pay part of the cost. He emphasized that the $9 allowance was a maximum; that his bill gave agency heads authority to fix it at a lower figure. He estimated Uncle Sam's total travel cost last year at 317 millions of which 166 millions was for military people. His bill covers civilian employes only. He said it would cost about 52 millions annually.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION has stopped converting its war service and temporary employes to regular status—until its big lay-off is over and its employment settles down. The present reduction of 8000 employes is forcing the agency to fire career non-veteran employes with as much as 25 and 30 days of service, mainly G-giris. Veterans with a year or so of service must be given preference under the present law.

Fay Will Take Up Use of City Phone For Numbers Calls

District Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson will confer with United States Attorney George Morris Fay this morning about information that his phone extension in the District Building may have been used for numbers operations.

An affidavit submitted in District Court Monday indicated Mrs. Lou M. Quimby, 1216 10th st. nw., a clerk in Pearson's office, used his phone extension to carry on numbers operations. Pearson said Mrs. Quimby has been moved to another part of the office and no longer has access to his extension.

The statement of Mrs. Quimby's operations was made in an affidavit signed by Miss Bernice Franklin, key Government witness in the special gambling probe conducted by Fay's office.

Slot Machine Referendum Set June 2 By County

Prince Georges Citizens to Vote At 46 Places On Legalization

Prince Georges County residents will vote June 2 on legalization of slot machines in the county, the Prince Georges County Commissioners decided yesterday.

The commissioners set that date for the referendum, which will be held in the 46 regular election places of the county from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. The election will cost about $11,000, the commissioners estimated.

The referendum is directed in a law enacted by the Maryland General Assembly and signed last week by Gov. W. Prescott Lane.

The law provides for licensing operation of pinball machines and console machines which pay cash or merchandise awards, but bans the use of the "one arm bandit" type of slot machine.

Annual licenses provided are: Class A, machines which do not pay awards, $25; Class B, pinball and claw machines which pay awards, $50; Class C, console machines, which pay awards, $75; Class D, operators' licenses for persons who own and operate on their own premises not more than one Class A or Class B machine $25 and for two Class C, $50 each.

Licenses for owners and operators of more than one A or B of two class C machines not to exceed 100 will cost $1000 each. Operators must be residents and voters of the county for at least two years and it will be unlawful to permit operation by minors under 18 under penalty of fines from $100 to $500.

Fines for operating the machines without a license run from $100 to $1000. Incorporated towns also may require a license in addition to the county license.

Council Asks Sewage Plant In Alexandria

The Alexandria City Council last night asked for a city charter amendment that would legally clear the way for the construction of a sewage treatment plant.

The action was taken by the council at the request of City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast, who called construction of the plant, "the most important project before you now."

In Richmond yesterday, the Virginia State Water Control Board ruled it would be necessary to treat sewage from the proposed 795-unit Hunting Towers Apartment project on Mount Vernon blvd.

The water control board administers the State law which forbids localities to increase above 1946 figures the volume of raw sewage dumped into State waters.

The board called in Alexandria officials Monday to ask generally what the city is doing to abate pollution of the Potomac.

Pancoast said the amendment, which must be approved by the Virginia General Assembly, should authorize the city to construct the plant by itself or in conjunction with other communities, and to levy rental fees to maintain it, and clarify the authority of the city to issue revenue bonds as a means of financing construction.

Man Stabbed to Death Over 75-Cent Debt

A 42-year-old man was stabbed to death with an ice pick last night as a result of an argument over a 75-cent debt, police said.

Police reported that Henry Irving Pickney of 1021 Lincoln pl. se., was stabbed in the chest five times at 2902 Pomeroy rd. se.

Police arrested Roscoe L. Craige, 23, 1414 Morris rd. se., at the scene and held him for a coroner's inquest today.

Bar Treats U. N. Official To Fireworks

Dr. Ivan Kerno, United Nations legal official, was treated to what he has become accustomed to at Lake Success—verbal fireworks—at the District Bar Association meeting last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

With a patient smile, the assistant secretary general in charge of U. N. legal affairs waited out the flood of oratory over an appointment of an executive secretary by the association.

The board of directors, it seems, appointed James D. Mann to the newly created $7500-a-year post. Some articulate members objected because he was an associate, not an active bar member.

Appointment Is Approved

The Czech diplomat peered intently through his horn-rimmed glasses as one speaker and then another wordily anatomized the meaning of words in the resolution authorizing the appointment. Approval was achieved by a disputed vote of 97 to 62.

At last Dr. Kerno was accorded the privilege of discussing legal problems of the U. N. He had flown from New York, and his plane had been stacked some two hours over National Airport, just to make the address.

Comparing U. N. debates with what his ears had just been treated to, Dr. Kerno urbanely observed with a broad smile: "Believe me, gentlemen, I feel right at home."

Urges Bar to Support U. N.

He urged bar members to support the U. N., outlined its legal setup, and concluded: "The United Nations must not only prevent war, but also lead to law and justice in all countries."

As for the controversial appointee, his task will include public relations, research and representation of the bar group on the Hill and before other civic groups. Mann is 41, a Navy veteran and lawyer who has been assistant to the executive secretary of the National Industrial Traffic League.

Another feature of the evening was presentation of an engraved plate to Louis Caldwell, chairman of the administrative law section of the bar, for outstanding service. Presentation was made by Judge E. Barrett Pretyman of the District Court of Appeals.

C. Melvin Sharpe Backs Grant Reappointment

C. Melvin Sharpe, president of the Board of Education, has appealed to leading Washington citizens to urge the reappointment of Lieut. Gen. U. U. Grant 3d as chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Sharpe said he was acting as an individual in seeking support for Grant, whose term expired April 30. He said he has been gratified by the response from those who told him they have written or wired President Truman in Grant's behalf.

Senate Committee Considers Nomination of Young Today

The Senate District Committee today will consider the President's nomination of J. Russell Young for reappointment as District Commissioner.

There were some indications last night that the committee might approve the nomination at today's 10:30 a. m. executive meeting unless some members insisted upon a prior public hearing.

Since the President sent Young's name to Congress last week for a fourth term, the Senate Committee has received only one letter in opposition to the appointment, staff members said.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) is the only committee member who has publicly opposed Young's reappointment.

The committee also is expected to act on four other bills of wide local interest. They are:

1. A bill calling for the temporary appointment of an additional judge to Juvenile Court to serve until the term of Judge Fay L. Bentley expires. She is a voluntary patient at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The Committee also will consider a District Bar Association bill that would create a permanent additional judgeship on the Juvenile bench.

2. A measure to continue the child day care program here until June 1950 under its present $150,000 appropriation. The House-passed child day care bill trimmed authorized operating funds to $50,000 for the coming year.

3. The House-passed bill setting up the legislative authority of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

4. A bill to permit the District government to kill weeds on unimproved land by modern spraying methods. It is aimed to speed up the eradication of ragweed.

A joint meeting of the Senate and House District subcommittees on banking and utilities will hold brief public hearings at 10 a. m. on two banking bills.

Spence Backs D. C. Share In Slum Bill

Banking Committee Head, Sparkman in Senate Will Work For Federal Funds

Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee last night backed full District participation in the slum-clearance program of the pending national housing bill.

Amendments clearing the way for the District Land Redevelopment Agency to receive funds under the national measure were submitted to the Banking Committee yesterday by Raymond E. Foley, administrator of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Sparkman Also in Favor

Spence said he "would do his very best" to win House approval of the land agency amendment and the Senate-passed provision to restore public housing site acquisition power to the National Capital Housing Authority.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), chairman of the Senate Banking Subcommittee on Housing, also supports both local amendments.

Without them, local and Federal housing officials have said, the District could not apply for Federal money for slum clearance and public housing under the pending bill.

Bill to Reach Floor Soon

Spence said he expects to have the housing bill ready for floor action within the next few days.

Foley wrote Spence that the proposed District amendments would in no way hamper the operation of the separate District Slum Clearance Act of 1946. "That act will continue in full force and effect" under the proposed amendments, he said.

Foley said the local legislation was drafted "as an alternative method whereby the land agency may be financed." The agency has never received any funds under its own 1946 act, although it has a 20-million-dollar authorization.

Bill Passed To Permit Sale Of Greenbelt

Congress yesterday sent to the President a bill authorizing negotiated, non-competitive sale of Greenbelt to veterans or mutual ownership groups.

The measure was so written to protect from eviction all non-veteran tenants now in the Government-owned nearby Maryland project.

Specifically the bill would permit, but not require, the Public Buildings Administrator to dispose of the three New Deal-born "green" towns—Greenbelt, Greendale, Wis., and Greenhills, Ohio—by means of negotiated sale to non-profit veteran or mutual ownership cooperative at "the fair market value."

The measure further authorizes PBA to transfer, as one condition of sale, streets, public utilities and surrounding parks to an "appropriate non-Federal agency" with or without reimbursement.

Greenbelt town officials and tenants testified in favor of the bill during congressional hearings, chiefly on grounds that it would gave them purchase preference over real estate "speculative buyers."

Greenbelt people have generally opposed Government sale of their project for fear of subsequent rent increase. But since Congress last year directed Government disposal of the three towns, most local tenants now feel the measure at least gives them sales priority on the 1892-unit project.

Seniors Get Civitan Honor Keys . . .

The Washington Post

Veterans Rally To Defend Use Of D. C. Center

The name and address of the District Veterans' Service Center has gained a national reputation and is now a quasi-Federal as well as a local institution, veterans' group told District Commissioners yesterday.

Representatives of the District's 16 veterans' groups rallied behind Col. Waldron E. Leonard, center director, in his opposition to a proposal by the Public Buildings Administration to move the center out of the Federally-owned building at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. to a District structure.

L. A. Ziernicki, PBA official in charge of space for District agencies, said the change was asked as part of a move to procure a million square feet of office space here to house the Sesquicentennial Commission and the 1950 census staff.

Director of Construction Archie G. Hutson, a member of the District space committee, declared the only space available for the center is the abandoned Logan School, located at 3rd and G sts. ne., near Union Station. He said the structure was badly located for such use.

The spokesmen for the veterans' groups testified to the continued need for the agency at its present location. They declared it is known throughout the country and is accessible for veterans coming from out of town. About 40 per cent of its services now go to these ex-servicemen.

The center now occupies about 4600 square feet, one-half of its original allotment. Ziernicki said this space was needed for another "high contact" Federal agency dislodged in the process of obtaining space for the new Federal functions.

The Commissioners took the matter under advisement.

Houle Promoted By Red Cross

Harold LeRoy Houle, 7104 Rhode Island ave., College Park, Md., has been appointed national director of the military welfare service of the American Red Cross, it was announced yesterday.

Houle, who has been with the Red Cross for more than 20 years, will direct nearly 600 field directors and their assistants stationed in military installations throughout the United States.

A native of Lost Nation, Iowa, Houle was superintendent of public schools in Defiance, Coggon and Carson, Iowa, before joining the Red Cross staff.

Gets 1 to 3 Years

Man Jailed For $37,000 Frauds Here

Anthony J. Forte, 37, was sentenced yesterday to serve one to three years in jail for $37,000 swindles of two prospective purchasers of a power shovel here.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut imposed the prison sentence in District Court. The defendant had a clear prior record and was making full restitution, the court was told.

According to the charges, Forte resided here in 1948 at the Willard Hotel and represented to two out-of-town construction men that he had control of a power shovel and crane which had been owned by the War Assets Administration.

The defendant took the customers to the Viers Mill Village housing development, showed them the apparatus and got down payments on it from both of them independently, court records show.

Exonerated in the transactions were his brother, Victor Forte; Dominic S. Fago, 40, of Buffalo and Jack Quigley, 47, of Pittsburgh.

6 Falls Church Candidates Support Plan

Six of nine candidates for election to the Falls Church City Council came out last night in support of a proposal that the city annex nearby portions of Fairfax Couny.

The candidates expressed their views at a political rally held in the Oak Street School under joint sponsorship of the Fairfax County League of Women Voters and the Southwest Falls Church Association. About 100 residents were on hand.

Indorsing the proposal were incumbent Councilmen Sherman Wells, J. H. McCarthy and Lee M. Rhodes; Samuel E. McCrary, a Navy Department electrical engineer; Mrs. Dillon S. Myer, housewife, and W. David Brewer, airlines statistician.

Councilman J. C. McRae and Albert A. Hovey King, a construction equipment supplier, reserved judgment pending completion of a preliminary survey to determine if the move is feasible. Former Councilman James E. Durant did not comment on the plan.

McCrary asserted the city could gain a surplus of $70,000 by taking over operation of its schools from Fairfax County. He charged the county is not "returning to Falls Church one-half the benefits we are entitled to," and added, "the way Fairfax County has milked the city is an outrage."

A suit filed by Falls Church to gain control of its schools is now before the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Thomas Circle Citizens Keep Veteran Head

Mrs. Ella Thompson, who has served as president of the Thomas Circle Citizens Association for 24 of its 29 years, was reelected to a twenty-fifth consecutive term last night.

Mrs. Thompson

The group, meeting at Mrs. Thompson's home, 1536 16th st. nw., also reelected Mrs. Fred Haig as vice president; Frank M. Thompson, husband of the president, as treasurer and corresponding secretary, and Mrs. N. B. Wilson as recording secretary.

In its business meeting, the group named a committee of three to study a proposed Federal loan to the District for school construction. Members of the committee, who are slated to report at the next meeting, are Kenneth Robbins, James Tobias and Thompson.

The association also adopted a resolution congratulating John Russell Young on his reappointment as District Commissioner.

E. P. Cunningham Elected Brookland Citizens Head

E. Perry Cunningham last night was elected president of the Brookland Citizens Association to succeed Arthur B. McNerney. The association met at Brookland School.

Other officers, elected at the meeting in the Brookland School, are John J. Mallen, vice president; Miss Mary K. Jones, secretary, and E. Fendall Cain, treasurer.

The retiring president and his successor were appointed delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Named as delegates to the Northeast Council of Citizens Associations were McNerney, Chester J. Wolf and William M. Bangs.

D. C. Williams Heads Randle Highlands Unit

David C. Williams, 1675 28th st. se., was elected president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night at its final spring meeting. He succeeds George L. Gregg.

The association meeting at the Randle Highlands School, 30th and R sts. se., also elected: Vice president, Carl E. Dunnington, 1724 30th st. se.; executive secretary, Mrs. J. S. Britt; assistant secretary, Mrs. J. J. McKeon, 2900 P st. se., and treasurer, Joseph F. Soresi, 2310 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Correction

At its meeting Monday night, the Garfield-Douglas Citizens Association adopted a resolution supporting the temporary transfer of Central or Roosevelt High School for use by Negro students. Tuesday's Washington Post incorrectly stated that the association opposed the transfer. The Post regrets the error.

Alexandria Postoffice Braces For Special Stamp Rush Today

Alexandria's postoffice was expecting one of its busiest days today as a special Alexandria Bicentennial stamp goes on sale.

Stamp collectors have been swamping the postoffice with more than 10,000 orders a day for the past three weeks, keeping 60 clerks working 10 hours a day seven days a week.

Postmaster Elmore Mudd estimated more than 250,000 orders had been received by last night.

Today the postoffice will be open from 8 a. m. to "at least" 8 p. m. to handle the expected crowd of stamp buyers, Mudd said.

The stamps will be sold today only in Alexandria. Thursday the 70-million issue will go on sale throughout the country.

In addition to straight stamp sales, 100,000 first-day covers (envelopes) already stamped will be on sale at a booth in front of the Alexandria Postoffice.

The Alexandria Bicentennial Commission has approved two covers.

One, called "official," bears pictures of the city seal, Gadsby's Tavern and Carlyle House, all of which appear on the special 6-cent air mail stamp.

Two other covers carry the picture of a 5-cent stamp issued in Alexandria in 1846. Bicentennial officials said only three stamps of this 1846 issue are still in existence and that each is worth $30,000.

The Postoffice Department has allotted a million of the stamps for sale in Alexandria.

The extra workers necessitated by the advance orders have been checking the money orders sent in by collectors, putting the special stamps on the self-addressed envelopes sent in by collectors, stamping the envelopes "First Day Issue" and putting on the Alexandria postmark.

The envelopes will be sent out through the mails today.

Orders, Postmaster Mudd said, have been received from all over the world.

Today was chosen as the date to issue the stamp because it is the 200th anniversary of the date on which the Virginia General Assembly authorized creation of the town which became Alexandria.

In connection with the stamp issue, the philatelic committee of the Bicentennial Commission will sponsor a luncheon at noon at the Old Club Teahouse, 555 S. Washington st., Alexandria.

Speakers at the luncheon will include Robert E. Fellers, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, and Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Senator Byrd and Representative Smith, Virginia Democrats who introduced the bills in Congress authorizing the stamp, and Mayor William T. Wilkins of Alexandria have been invited to the luncheon to receive albums.

Boy Who Made Two Rescues To Be Awarded Scholarship

Winning awards for heroism is getting to be a habit with Joseph Fisher, 13-year-old Washington school boy.

Joseph

Today he will officially learn he is one of two winners of the Popsicle youth award—a four-year scholarship to Syracuse University.

Joe, who plans to be a surgeon, risked his life to rescue two youngsters from oncoming automobiles.

First he yanked to safety a boy slipping in the path of an auto at 5th and Sheridan sts. nw. on October 7, 1947. For that Miss Margaret Truman pinned the American Automobile Association life-saving medal on his chest.

In April, 1943, he repeated the performance at the same crossing where he was an AAA schoolboy patrolman. He received last June the regional award in the Popsicle contest, including a gold medal and $100 bond presented by Bob Feller, Clevela d Indian pitching ace, and the award chairman.

Today he was to be surprised with a phone call from Feller, to learn he won the national scholarship award. Word leaked out prematurely but Joe is still excited about talking to the Indian hurler.

"I want to tell him," says Joe, "that maybe his pitching looks like he's in a rut but I haven't lost faith in him, not m:."

Joe will receive the call at 10 a. m. in a studio of Radio Station WRC. Monday, the Paul Junior high honor student will go to New York with his parents, Morris and Ida Fisher of 707 Somerset pl. nw.

And Wednesday he'll be honored at a dinner in the Sherry Netherlands Hotel, with Bob Feller, Mayor O'Dwyer of New York, the Syracuse dean and other notables in attendance. Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, will present the award to Joe, a former carrier for the paper.

Montgomery Asks School Budget of $5,031,529

Request Is Largest County Ever Made; Mrs. Sandifer New President of Board

The proposed Montgomery County school budget of $5,031,295 for next year—largest in county history—was made public yesterday by the county board of education.

Officials said $1,284,822 is expected from the State, and asked the county for an appropriation of $3,746,707.

This amount is an increase of $868,304 over county funds given the schools last year.

At its regular meeting in Rockville, the board elected Mrs. Durward V. Sandifer president, succeeding H. Stanley Stine. Mrs. Sandifer was reappointed Monday by Governor Lane to another six-year term.

The board also reappointed Edwin W. Broome, veteran school superintendent, to another four-year term. His salary is $10,000 annually, contributed equally by State and county. Dr. Broome is in his thirty-third year as county school superintendent.

Officials said the budget is designed to cover operating costs only, and that a later budget will show construction needs.

Biggest single item in the operating budget is for teacher's salaries. A total of $3,798,270 is set aside for this purpose, with $1,203,322 coming from the State and $2,594,948 requested from the county.

An increase of $587,513 is asked in county funds for teacher pay. Part of this, the school board said, is to bring the county closer to realization of its prescribed full salary schedule. Half of the teachers are on the full schedule now. The money would go to the remainder of the teachers, giving them half of the amount necessary to bring them to full scale.

A provision in the budget says no teacher may receive more than a $400 increase in any one year. Officials explained this would result in some teachers having to wait until the third year before getting on the full pay schedule. It also is planned to place a few teachers on the full schedule at once, if they are within two years of retirement.

The budget asks for a $250,000 appropriation for Montgomery Junior College, which has this year received $15,000 from the county.

An appropriation of $14,800 for establishment of a special school for crippled children also is requested. An initial enrollment of 12 to 15 children is anticipated. The fund would be used to pay two teachers, one physiotherapist, one halftime speech therapist and one attendant.

The school board described its budget as "fair and reasonably adequate for the schools for next year." It also said the budget is "an attempt to recapture some of the loss to the schools that occurred during and since the war period."

Andrews Air Base Prisoner Escapes; Retaken in 2 Hours

A 19-year-old Andrews Air Force Base prisoner, awaiting trial on three charges, escaped from a work detail early yesterday, but was recaptured less than two hours later by an alert sergeant.

The prisoner, Pfc. William R. Pettey, of Indianapolis, sneaked off around 8:30 a. m. while working in the base library, according to the field's public relations office. He was recaptured shortly after 10 o'clock by Sgt. Irvin Throckmorton, of the Andrews Air Police. Throckmorton said he surprised the fugitive on a road about two and a half miles from the camp.

Pettey first escaped from the air base last September, while awaiting trial on an auto theft charge. He was recaptured last month in Kentucky and returned to the base to stand trial on additional charges of desertion and escape, the public relations office said.

23 Fliers Buried In Common Grave

By The Associated Press

In one coffin on an Arlington cemetery hillside, the remains of 23 American airmen were buried yesterday.

Four years ago—Eastener, Westener, Midwestener; Protestant, Jew, Catholic; sergeant, lieutenant, captain, colonel—they had met death together in a bombing raid over Japan.

Yesterday—with military honors—they were buried together.

Approximately 150 relatives and friends attended the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic services conducted by the ceremonial company of the Third Infantry from Fort Myer.

As the flag-covered coffin was removed from a hearse and carried to the grave, the Army Band played "Abide With Me." Then as the military attendants held the flag suspended above the coffin, the band played "Nearer My God to Thee" and the services began.

The first part, conducted by Chaplain Maj. Elbert L. Atkinson, was for the 15 Protestants; the second, by Chaplain Lieut. Col. Henry Tavel, for the one Jew, and the last, by Chaplain Lieut. John T. Lawler, for the seven Catholics.

When Lieutenant Lawler concluded, three volleys were fired across the flower-banked grave, a bugler sounded taps, a more distant bugler sounded a reply, the flag was folded, the band played "Onward Christian Soldiers" and the services were over.

Among those attending was Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, who was in charge of the first B-29 raid over Tokyo on November 24, 1944.

He is godfather to the son of Col. Birrell Walsh of Corono Del Mar, Calif., one of those buried. General O'Donnell, now commander of the Fifteenth Air Force, Colorado Springs, Colo., flew to Washington for the services.

The 23 lost their lives on Feb. 10, 1945. Two B-29s in which the men were flying were moving over Guma prefecture in Japan. Flack struck one of the planes, knocked it into the other, and both fell.

In the two crews were four from Pennsylvania, three from California, two each from Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, and one each from New York, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Maryland.

Switzerland War Claims Approved

The House yesterday passed a bill authorizing payment of $16,000,000 in war damage claims to Switzerland, including interest.

The money will reimburse Switzerland for damages due to misplaced bombs and forced landings of planes in the war. The country had filed claims amounting to $19,500,000, but the United States has admitted liability on only $16,000,000. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Postlude

Church Choir Offers Verdi Requiem

Giuseppe Verdi's Requiem is a theater piece, compounded of fiery music and the fear of eternal torment. Written between Aida and Otello, the Requiem constantly reminds the auditor of the great lyrical gifts of its composer.

Last night the work was presented in Constitution Hall by the choir of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church under the direction of Charles Dana Beaschler. Soloists were Rose Suzanne Der Derian, soprano; Shirley Winston mezzo; Marion Whitten, tenor, and Robert Nicholson, baritone. William Watkins was the organist, and one of the season's strangest collections of good and bad players made up the orchestra.

The ancient text was unfortunately sung in English. The great drawback to this procedure was that the accents in English frequently conflict directly with the music written by Verdi.

Miss Der Derian has an attractive voice which she uses well. Her soft work floats easily, her high C is solid and well placed.

Shirley Winston, singing in the range which is hers by nature, sounded handsome. A bit nervous at times, she tended to push the more operatic phrases, but her work is so improved over her last appearances that it was a real pleasure to hear her.

Whitten took the rough tenor part well, and when not held back by too slow a tempo, sounded quite at home. His lyric tenor is a real find. It was an off night for Nicholson in pitch, style, and diction.

Beaschler gets a good solid tone from his chorus but does not make his demands sufficiently dramatic for them to rise to the heights they so fully possess. The real trouble with the evening was a lack of understanding of how to manage the orchestra, plus an unawareness of the meaning and style of Verdi's music.

The Sanctus died on its feet, taken at half its proper speed. The Lacrymosa was ruined by a mixup in the orchestra, which the conductor should have checked. And so on. It was too bad.

Dr. Smith, Retired Geologist, Dies at Home in Vermont

Dr. Phillip Sidney Smith, 71, retired chief Alaskan geologist of the United States Geological Survey, died yesterday at St. Albans, Vt.

Philip Smith

Dr. Smith left his Washington home last month to attend a directors' meeting of the Arctic Institute of North America in Montreal on April 29.

During a visit with his daughter in St. Albans on his way home, he contracted pneumonia and died in a hospital there. His wife, the former Lenore W. Kinney, and a member of the D. C. Board of Education and the D. C. Library Board, and their three children were with him at the time of his death.

A native of Medford, Mass., Dr. Smith was with the Geological Survey for 40 years—from 1906 to 1946. He entered the Government service from Harvard University where he took his B. A., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees, and taught from 1900 to 1906.

Geology became his life work. Dr. Smith once told a reporter, when he signed up for a "snap" course in the subject during his undergraduate years at Harvard.

It took him straight to Alaska when he left Harvard in 1906 and began surveying the uncharted wastes there for the Geological Survey. He was appointed Chief Alaskan Geologist in 1924 and served in that post until his retirement.

In 1933-34 he took on the additional job of engineer for the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works in Alaska. His work also included reports on areal, economic and physiographic geology in Geological Survey and other technical publications.

ABC Suspends Statler Permit For One Day

The Statler Hotel's liquor license was suspended, effective May 23, for a 24-hour period by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday.

The hotel was found guilty of selling liquor on credit to persons not registered as hotel guests. A warning was issued by the board to the Hamilton Hotel, convicted of similar charges.

The Statler's suspension will last from 8 a. m. May 23 to 8 a. m. the following day, board members announced. Last Thursday, at an ABC hearing, hotel officials admitted the charges but said it was sometimes impossible to avoid selling intoxicants on credit to nonregistered persons.

ABC inspectors studied the Statler's records over a 26-day period last month. According to one board member, the records for two days were selected at random and introduced as evidence to show 33 cases of credit sales to nonregistered persons.

For a similar period, inspectors going over Hamilton Hotel records turned up four violations, the board members said.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Anne Lawler called this morning about next week's church supper. She wanted each of us on the committee to call a list of people so we'll know how many to expect.

After I'd finished the breakfast dishes, I sat down at the telephone and started calling one person right after another. I was down to the fourth name on my list before I stopped to think of the other folks on my party line. Here I'd tied up the line for fifteen minutes without a break. Supposing someone else on the line wanted to make a call!

Needless to say, I ended my "calling marathon" right then and there. I'll make the rest of those calls later on in the day, one by one and spaced several minutes apart.

AAUW President Assailed As 'Medusa' in Court Appeal

The United States Court of Appeals was told yesterday that Dean Althea K. Hottel, president of the American Association of University Women, is a "Medusa" and a "high-riding kingfish."

Dr. Hottel, dean of women at the University of Pennsylvania, merely smiled at the unflattering description given by Attorney John A. Croghan, who represents the Washington branch of the AAUW.

The national organization which Dr. Hottel heads went to the appeals court in an attempt to get reversal of an injunction preventing them from ousting the local branch.

The crux of the case is whether the Washington group can ban Negroes from membership. This 65-year policy was brought into the open when Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, widow of a Municipal Court judge, was refused admission.

Attorney Charles A. Horsky, representing the National AAUW, argued that the local group was unwarrantedly acting in the face of an antidiscrimination policy adopted by the parent organization.

Horsky said that the lower court's injunction interfered unnecessarily with the workings of a private organization.

Croghan admitted in his answer that the by-laws of the organization said that Negroes were "eligible" for membership but stated that members of that race could be refused admission despite their eligibility.

Then as the tribunal consisting of Judges E. Barrett Prettyman, Bennett C. Clark and Wilbur K. Miller listened with stony faces, Croghan said:

"We say that the arbitrary and malevolent attempt of Dean Medusa Hottel and her sister Gorgons of the national board to exclude the Washington branch from the organization was unlawful and void."

He elaborated by calling Dr. Hottel a "high-riding kingfish" in the way she was handling the problem.

(Ed. note. Webster's New International Dictionary, second edition, says a Gorgon is one of three fabled sisters, Stheno, Euryale and Medusa, with snaky hair and of terrifying aspect which turned the beholder to stone.)

The tribunal took the entire case under advisement.

Col. Robert C. Brady

Solemn requiem mass for Col. Robert C. Brady, 64, Annapolis native and veteran of 35 years' service in the Army who died in Philadelphia Saturday, will be sung at 9 a.m. Thursday in the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Brady entered the Army in 1909 after graduating from St. John's College, Annapolis. He was commissioned in the Cavalry two years later and was transferred to the Quartermaster Corps in 1920.

In 1917, Col. Brady was assistant to the commanding officer of the Quartermaster Depot in Baltimore. During the early 20's, he served as assistant chief of staff, G-4, for Organized Reserve Cavalry divisions in Hagerstown and Towson, Md.

Just before retiring in 1944, he commanded the Richmond Army Service Forces Depot. His Army duty also took him to bases in Panama, Canada and the Philippines, and three times to the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot.

Since his retirement, Colonel Brady has been living in Philadelphia and has worked with the Veterans Advisory Council of that city and with the Bureau of Rehabilitation of the Pennsylvania State Department of Labor.

Kimball Tells Navy Sponsors:

Progress Toward Unification Is Steady But Not Peaceful

By Norma Lanum

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY KIMBALL said yesterday that unification of the armed forces was making progress "but not a peaceful progress" every day.

He was guest speaker at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel which closed the two-day annual convention of the Society of Navy Sponsors, all members of which have christened Navy ships.

The various services are composed of men with "strong convictions and strongly held convictions," he went on, so it is not expected that the forces will be consolidated without friction.

The new Assistant Secretary also traced the Navy's record during the past two wars, asserting that the Navy always has been able to adapt itself to new phases of warfare.

Without specifically mentioning the Navy's super carrier, the United States, whose construction was recently halted by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Kimball said the Navy has "temporarily lost use of a new weapon."

In conclusion he told society members "my one regret about the society is that it is growing so slowly because we are building so few ships."

Among the honor guests at the head table with the speaker and Mrs. Julian Smith, reelected president of the society, were Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. John L. Sullivan, wife of the retiring Secretary of Navy; Mrs. Louis Denfeld, wife of Admiral Denfeld, chief of Naval Operations; Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Clifton Cates, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Arthur Dewey Struble, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. O. P. Smith, and Capt. Frank Akiss, Navy chaplain, who led the invocation at the opening of the luncheon.

Also reelected yesterday morning to serve for another year were Mrs. J. E. Palmer, first vice president; Mrs. Harry Baldridge, of Annapolis, second vice president, and Mrs. Stanton Norman, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Leland Webb of Los Angeles and Mrs. James P. Casbarian were elected new members of the board of trustees, and reelected to the board were Mrs. Andrew C. Pickens, Mrs. Denfeld, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Robert F. Smallwood, Mrs. Royall Ingersoll and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall.

Benefit Aids Underprivileged

FASHION shows continue as the favorite mediums for raising funds among local women's organizations. Last night at 8:30, the Junior Women's Club of Chevy Chase sponsored such an event at the Woman's Club. Silver offerings, made at the door, will go toward providing approximately 20 underprivileged children with daily lunches at the Clarksburg, Md., Elementary School next year.

Mrs. Benton Strickler, president of the club, headed the fashion show committee. Assisting her were Mrs. Paul Alexander, Mrs. William M. Wilson, Mrs. R. R. Crans and Mrs. Robert P. Dunlop. Fashions were presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co. and flowers were by Blackistone, Inc.

Next week's fashion show schedule calls for an unusual affair, to be presented at a luncheon session of the twenty-fourth annual conference of the Seaboard Region of Hadassah, on Monday in the Pan American Room of the Statler Hotel.

Entitled an "Israeli Fashion Show," the event will be divided into two parts—clothes to Israel and clothes from Israel. Featured in the first group will be the types of clothing which Hadassah has been sending to Israel for the past 37 years.

The clothing in the latter half of the show will be from Israel, designed and custom-made in that country.

Worth While to Visit

'Outgrown Shop' Show Features Budget Fashions

By Peggy Preston

TWO TYPES OF customers frequent the Junior League's "Outgrown Shop" at 2001 Mass. Ave., nw. There are those who come to sell used clothes, and those who come to buy.

Depending on the category into which you fit—and it may well be both—you should make a visit there in the immediate future. Believe us, it will be worth your while.

Yesterday, this reporter looked in on a fashion show, presented by workers in the "Outgrown Shop" at a luncheon-meeting at the United Nations Club. What we saw was really somethin'!

Jewel—At a Price

Now, fancy for yourself a svelte dinner ensemble—skirt and jacket of heavy chalk white crepe, embroidered in crystal beading. It's a veritable jewel of a dress. And the price—or must you ask? Promise not to tell, but it's exactly $25. Looks like a million, too, in size 14.

Or how about a navy butcher linen, complete with circular skirt, cummerbund, bolero jacket, and red polka dot rayon blouse. Snappy and cute, priced at $8.50. The red straw bonnet, with veil? On the Q. T., it sells for $3.50.

Then there is that dream of a white nylon net dance dress, with strapless bodice of lace. We blush to mention the price—$11.50. And a white pique dinner dress, studded in sequins and rhinestones—about $15 . . . a gold trimmed white crepe negligee . . . cottons, tie silks, summer suits for town and country, frocks for any occasion.

Junior League Models

All these, and many more were displayed by "models", young women of the Junior League who work at the shop, at yesterday's show. Among them were Mrs. James Lynn, Miss Virginia Summerlin, Miss Mary McLaughlin, Mrs. Gordon Dickey, Mrs. Jack Davis Neal, Mrs. Clyde Doran, Miss Betty Easton, Mrs. McCain Smith, Mrs. Stanfield Johnson, Mrs. John B. Stanley, Mrs. Emmett Echols, Mrs. Edward F. Hamm, jr., and Mrs. Clyde Verkeke.

Mrs. John Cutler, commentator for the show, turned up in a taupe crepe original by Charles Armour, which had been worn once, then sold to the shop. It has a price tag as pretty as itself. Mrs. Hilbert Sabin, pianist, who provided a musical background for the show, wore a forest green outfit, consisting of gabardine suit and matching hat.

The "Outgrown Shop," specializing in the resale of secondhand clothing, is one of the many projects sponsored by the league for the benefit of a local charity. Net proceeds from the shop, amounting each year to approximately $6,500, go to the Department of Psychiatry at Children's Hospital.

Harris & Ewing

HANDSOME chalk white dinner suit, embroidered in crystal beading, is modeled by Miss Mary McLaughlin of the Junior League's "Outgrown Shop." It is one of a dozen or more costumes which were shown yesterday at a luncheon-fashion show at the United Nations Club, presented by members of the shop committee

Showers Surprise Bride-to-Be on Television Now

So now they're entertaining at surprise bridal showers on television.

Guest of honor at such an affair on Ruth Crane's Modern Woman television program last night over WMAL-TV was Miss Barbara Schneider. And a mightily startled young bride-to-be she was when she stepped unexpectedly into the middle of a real, live "Tel Party."

The idea for her party was dreamed up by three of Barbara's friends, Rose Brown, Jeanne Vaughan and June Sonnenberg. Mrs. Crane was game, and female staff members at WMAL-TV immediately began buying shower gifts.

Plotting was thick and heavy. Rose invited Barbara and her fiance, Bill Groome, to dinner. At the last minute she called to ask them to pick up her wallet at the studios before meeting her for the evening. Suddenly Barbara found herself on television, surrounded with packages and facing a table filled with sandwiches, cake and punch.

To Entertain

Mrs. Elizabeth Bussing of New York will entertain a party of 20 at luncheon tomorrow at the Water Gate Inn.

On the Capital Party Calendar . . .

MRS. TOM CONNALLY, wife of the Senator from Texas, was entertained at luncheon yesterday at Olney Inn by wives of the Texas delegation in Congress. Mrs. Connally formed the first Texas ladies' group more than a decade ago.

Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, wife of the Texas junior Senator, Presented a silver bowl to Mrs. Connally on behalf of the group, and Mrs. William R. Poage, wife of the Chairman of the Texas delegation, served as toastmistress.

MEMBERS of the Chilean Embassy staff and their wives entertained last evening in the Palladian Room of the Shoreham Hotel at a farewell dinner for Carlos Mardones, Second Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, and Senora de Mardones. Senor Mardones has been transferred to the Chilean Embassy at Madrid.

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora Nieto del Rio were in the company and others were the Minister-Counselor of the Equadorean Embassy and Senora de Moscoso, the Commercial Counselor of the Bolivian Embassy and Senora de Rovira and the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray.

SENORA MARIA ELENA TAYLOR, who has recently come to Washington to live, was hostess at luncheon yesterday in the Palladian Room at the Shoreham Hotel.

Argentine-born, Senora Taylor has been visiting in New York for several months before coming to Washington. After the death of Mr. Taylor, who was an American, she elected to make her home in this country.

Ranking guest at the luncheon yesterday was Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Others were Senora de Corominas, wife of the Argentine Ambassador to the Organization of American States; Senora de Lopez, wife of Gen. Estanislo Lopez, chief of the Argentine delegation to the Inter-American Defense Board; Senora de Fernandez, Mrs. Kenneth Oakley, Senora de Rovira, Mrs. Henry Lewis, Mrs. Fleck Miller and Mrs. Raymond Shiver.

Charming Louis Bromfield Joins the Ladies to Learn Why Men Are Fascinating

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A FEW days ago we caught Louis Bromfield red-handed, surrounded by gullible women, spreading charm like crazy. Here briefly on Chamber of Commerce business, the redoubtable Pulitzer prize winner and author of a dozen best sellers was so undone by Washington high living he fairly leapt at the chance to tear off a Thayer column. Since Louis was smart enough to marry into the family, and since he usually stings editors five bucks a word, we're terribly appreciative. But before giving him full rein, we'll note a few eccentricities. Despite his youthful haircut, Bromfield dotes on his wrinkles, chose the below snapshot because it shows them to full advantage. Despite his loose talk about life, love, the world heigh-ho, he's an almost nauseatingly model husband and father. He should know what makes men attractive. Recently his own magnetism, plus perhaps a small fraction of ability, was so potent that the city of Wichita Falls, Tex., presented him not only with a ranch but also $65,000 pin money for erecting buildings to suit his fancy . . . So we give you Farmer Bromfield in a brand-new role.

THIS column is being written to appease my cousin-in-law by marriage, twice removed, Molly Thayer, who is going off to Europe and won't be able to deliver her copy every morning on the dot.

The subject of this essay is "What Makes Men Fascinating to Women?" and is not original. Among the ladies it arose spontaneously at a recent mixed luncheon party given by one of Washington's busiest hostesses.

The hostess followed the British custom of segregating the men and women after lunch, a custom which, out of long training in Latin countries and particularly in France, I resent. When I go out to a meal with ladies, it is the ladies I want to see and talk with. I can and do see the men in offices, on fishing trips, in men's bars and clubs where men are able to retire and dig themselves in.

MR. BROMFIELD

On this particular day, knowing my hostess very well, I rebelled and joined the ladies, singlehanded. My hostess, an outspoken friend from the Southwest, said, "What makes you think you're so fascinating?"

My answer was, "I don't think I'm fascinating. I've never thought about it. I'm just selfish and go where the most fun is. And even one man is a help in the yacketty-yacketty which goes on the moment a lot of women get together."

Well, anyway, the ladies fell quickly into a discussion of what makes men fascinating and successful with women.

I made a contribution now and then—objectively—as I have never thought much about being fascinating. I am certainly not handsome, and I hope I am not altogether repulsive. Whatever success I have had arises, I think, from a certain boyish innocence coupled with a liking for the bawdy. I contributed nothing out of experience, but only from the detached and objective reservations of a professional novelist.

Almost as one the ladies placed vitality as the No. 1 quality. Next they placed a certain gallantry and tenderness which I have observed, objectively, are very successful from the point of view of tactics. Then one of the cleverest and most experienced ladies said, "My man has got to have a sense of humor and wit. If I'm going into a love affair or a marriage I want it to be with fun and laughs now and then and not a continuous rumble of moans and torrid intensity."

Then I made a contribution, purely out of observation, that the most successful men with women whom I had observed invariably had a kind of nonmasculine intuition which always kept them one jump ahead of the lady they had designs upon, and which kept them informed constantly concerning the advance reactions and plottings of the lady. This observation was received with a great deal of approval. A couple of the ladies fell silent for a moment, going rapidly over their pasts to check up, finally made the vote unanimous.

A little puzzled at this point, I said, "But none of you has even mentioned good looks," to which the most experienced lady present (so far as I could judge) observed, "Pooh. Looks are nothing, except at the first glance. They're merely superficial, and the handsome man rides along on his looks, expecting them to carry him along. That makes him a bore."

BEFORE the segregated males joined us, the ladies counted on their fingers the list of men they had known who were famous for their success with the ladies. After the ballot was taken it was found that two internationally known gentlemen were tied for first place and neither of them could have been called handsome by the faintest stretch of the imagination. If you want the names, they were the great pianist, Artur Rubinstein, and the French playwright, Henri Bernstein. In the whole list there was not one who had been known primarily for his good looks.

My experienced friend rose, saying, "You may have the Hollywood pretty boys. They're for bobby soxers who've never been anywhere."

Then the segregated males came in, looking as if they would have found lunch with their secretaries more agreeable and entertaining than the segregation they had just suffered.

Maybe the conversation seems a trivial one, but it was awfully fundamental where males and females and the future of the human race are concerned. If you believe in Darwin, the chances are that the human race is going to grow uglier and uglier rather than prettier and prettier.

Consul General Tells PEO Delegates

How Mexico Educated Its Millions

By Genevieve Reynolds

ILLITERACY in Mexico was reduced from nine million in 1945 to 6.5 million in 1947, Rafael Avelerya, Consul General of Mexico, told delegates to the 14th annual convention of the District Chapter, P.E.O. Sisterhood, at a banquet last night at Hotel 2400.

"Mexico's campaign against illiteracy reached its climax in 1945 when the government passed an emergency law imposing upon each person who knew how to read and write the obligation to teach at least two persons in one year to read and write or to contribute to a special fund for that purpose," explained the Consul General, terming the campaign the "most dramatic gesture of its kind ever recorded in any part of the world."

The speaker pointed out that incorporation of the Indians demanded special efforts and widespread action on the part of the Government as well as on that of the educated classes.

Tracing "The Evolution of Education in Mexico," Consul Aveleyra pointed out that the fusion of Spanish and Aztec cultures and peoples presented the problem of creating one civilization. Missionaries taught the Indians the Spanish language, writing, customs and moral standards. As a result, education remained in the hands of the religious orders up to the middle of the nineteenth century, according to the speaker.

"Cultural achievements were remarkable during that period," he explained. "The first university, library and printing shop on the American continent were established in Mexico."

"But, the benefits of the school did not reach the rural population until after the revolutions of 1910 and 1917," he continued.

Mrs. Lucille Moore Shields, treasurer of P. E. O. supreme chapter, and officers of the state chapter were guests of honor at the banquet. Mrs. Opal Brewster, state president, brought greetings and Mrs. N. Porterfield, general chairman of the banquet served as toastmastress. A reception followed the banquet.

Harris & Ewing

TAKING time out for an informal check of the national P.E.O. Sisterhood at the fourteenth annual State convention of the District Chapter are (left to right) Mrs. Cora Edgington Coombs, first vice president of the D. C. Chapter; Mrs. Lucille Moore Shields of New York, supreme treasurer and guest of honor at the two-day convention; Mrs. Opal Brewster, president of the District Chapter. The convention opened yesterday at Hotel 2400 and will adjourn this afternoon.

At the opening session of the two-day convention, Mrs. Brewster read a letter from Mrs. Truman, who is a member of Chapter S. The First Lady expressed regret that she was unable to attend and wished the convention success in every way.

Mrs. Josephine Stanfield, second vice president of the District chapter, reported that the total educational fund of the supreme chapter totaled $838,302 with $58,984 granted in loans. Three District girls now hold scholarship loans to Cottey Junior College, one of which is sponsored by the D. C. chapter.

She further reported that the D. C. Chapter last year gave $814 to the Cottey Junior College in Nevada, Mo., which is owned and operated by the supreme chapter.

Featured at the morning session was a memorial service for members who have died during the past year, under the direction of Mrs. Anne M. Wilkinson, past State president.

'Cold War' Not Over, Miss Sadler Tells Club

"Lifting of the Berlin blockade doesn't mean that the cold war is over," Miss Christine Sadler, Washington representative of McCall's Magazine, told members of the Ward-Belmont Club of Washington in a luncheon address yesterday at the Parrott Restaurant.

Miss Sadler, who covered the Berlin airlift last February, pointed out that all the causes that led to the blockade are still there. For example, she cited the currency problem and the Western-Eastern division in Germany.

The speaker said that she found the German people cold and hungry.

Mrs. Robert S. Henry, club president, presided and introduced the speaker. Following the program Miss Arlen Smith was elected club president; Mrs. Dwight Webb, vice president; Mrs. Winston Folk, secretary; and Mrs. Morgan Reynolds, treasurer.

Mrs. Powers Heads Bethesda Women's Club

Mrs. Richard J. Powers was reelected president of the Woman's Club of Bethesda at the May business meeting held yesterday at the clubhouse. Others elected or reelected to office for the following year are Mrs. J. Braddock Bodley, first vice president; Mrs. Jarl Larson, second vice president; Mrs. C. Breck Parkman, recording secretary; Mrs. Harold R. Gearhart, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Walter L. Brauer, treasurer; Mrs. T. Emmert Beall, historian; Mrs. Edwin F. Wanner, parliamentarian, and Mrs. Jesse Price, director to the county federation.

Elected to the board of directors were Mrs. Joseph A. Guard and Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle.

Writer Takes Issue With Diagnostic Critical Attitude of Mind Prevalent Today; Finds It Conspicuously Short on Helpful Understanding

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In all humility and with the deepest interest in your work, I should like to offer the following thoughts:

We moderns deal too much in the diagnostic and critical attitude towards our fellows. It is not helpful, and actually it isn't meant to be. We adopt it not to help, but because it sounds smart and sophisticated and makes us feel complacently superior.

The critical attitude really reduces our ability to help, for it involves us in much contention and strife. I am not against a judicious rebuke or even firm denunciation when it is called for; but it is much easier to be righteously indignant than to be patient. It is fun to give advice, but hard to give it with love, with compassion and understanding—without which it is worthless.

Scientific View Is Partly Blind

SCIENCE is working towards a well-integrated mature human animal; but even if this should be attained by technical means, it still would not be anything final, for man is potentially more than that—as every man knows, try as he will to ignore or deny it.

The New Testament writers, while individually different in their speaking, understood far better than we the "ins and outs" of human consciousness. They saw a man whole and in all his relationships. Our scientific minds see man only in part.

Man has within himself the capacity for experiencing a quality of life called by Christ "eternal." The precise meaning I don't understand, but I believe it to be true. Christ was able to transform even the most ignorant into wise men; to make whole those who had been given up as beyond hope; and to make great saints of previously afflicted or destructive men.

Compassion Is Key to Helping Others

JESUS was the most scathing, the most penetrating and the most demanding critic; but at the same time He had power because all was held in great personal meekness and a great unselfish love. To the sick and confused His message was: "Neither do I condemn thee." Or, "Thy sins are forgiven thee; take up thy bed and go into thine house." He is still the Great Physician.

I don't suppose it is your role to teach religion; but I would suggest that you read a bit of the New Testament daily before you write your column. Through contact with Christ we are helped beyond our own power, and our partial efforts are completed and made effective.

Leave dragon-slaying to other writers and consider that you are coming to the lame, the halt and the blind, and many who are possessed with devils. Like the cripple at the pool of Bethesda—who had suffered much at the hands of physicians—many of your correspondents have no man to help them. With sincere good wishes.

R. J.

Haste, Pressure Blight Awareness

DEAR R. J.: The critical attitude, when empty of creative insight, is a hasty ill-considered offering. And if it is indeed more prevalent in our times than ever before, perhaps we should recognize it as a by-product of the driving pressure and cumulative fatigue that characterize our machine-age civilization, in which even "thinkers" are assigned to "produce" at assembly line speed.

Indispensable to any effort to approximate wholeness of understanding is leisure for contemplative stillness of mind, so that truth may enter in and be perceived. Jesus demonstrated His awareness of this requirement by periodically withdrawing from the multitudes, and from His teaching, to revivify His inner contact with the "eternal,"—in circumstances that rested the fibers of His physical being.

Jewish Child Home Donor Luncheon Held

The District of Columbia Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children at Denver held their thirteenth annual donor luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

On hand to commend the local organization for their work was the senior Senator from Colorado, Edwin C. Johnson, who said that interest in the home would be understandable for Denver residents but was particularly praiseworthy for Washingtonians 2000 miles away.

Singled out for credit was Mrs. Fannie E. Lorber, who has been national president of the home for 42 years. Mrs. Lorber, who flew in from Denver yesterday morning to attend the luncheon in Washington, gave members first hand reports of the progress made by asthmatic children at the home.

Mrs. Lorber, who was called "an angel on earth" by Senator Johnson, had a Washington counterpart in Mrs. Jack Zoltrow whom the members call "the Fannie Lorber of Washington."

Bloedorn Explains Heart Death Rate

The high incidence of death from heart disease should not be frightening, members of the Washington Club were told by Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn at a meeting yesterday.

Dr. Bloedorn, who is dean of the school of medicine and also medical director of George Washington University Hospital, said that "while cardio-vascular diseases lead all causes of death one need not be apprehensive."

He explained that the decrease of deaths from other causes—chiefly the lower incidence of infant mortality and deaths from contagious diseases—means that more people live to die later of heart disease.

"The encouraging thing is that the span of life has increased and that deaths from heart disease for people under 35 has decreased," he continued.

Ask Anne About Mosquito Control Spray

What is the most effective method of mosquito control in marsh areas where spraying DDT solutions from airplanes is too costly and impractical?
J. R. G.

H. H. Stage, acting in charge, Division of Insects Affecting Man and Animals, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, United States Department of Agriculture, has this to say in answering your question: "In general, it is difficult to set up a mosquito control program without the aid of trained mosquito control worker, entomologist, or sanitary engineer. Only a person of this training can make surveys, recommend materials and amounts, and advise the laborers who will do the actual larviciding. Many communities set up a mosquito abatement district which, if it is authorized in your state, can tax real property and so provide funds for mosquito control purposes. Depending upon the area concerned, a fair budget might run from 5 thousand to 30 or 40 thousand dollars a year.

"Generally speaking, about 40 gallons of diesel fuel oil is used per acre of water surface where the mosquitoes are found breeding, or if DDT is used in the oil only about 2 quarts of a 5 per cent DDT oil is required per acre of water surface. At the latter rate, if applied under the direction of a well trained man, no wildlife will be injured and good mosquito control can be effected. Mosquito control is a highly technical problem and we do not recommend it being supervised by such organizations as a citizen's group, Boy Scouts, or Junior Chamber of Commerce except in rare instances."

Amplifying his statement about mosquito abatement districts, Mr. Stage says that there are about 100 mosquito abatement districts in the United States. The first step you should take in attempting to have your district so designated is to contact your State Health Officer. His office will make a survey of your district to determine the extent of the need and if the program is to go forward, will place a trained worker in charge to supervise the work. With this type of program, the control work is set up in a larger area than would be possible if one individual or community were attempting it and would be, therefore, much more effective.

A representative of the United States Public Health Service said in discussing your problem with me that spraying with airplanes is the most effective means of covering large areas, but that small areas may be sprayed by hand or mechanical sprayers with 5 per cent DDT in oil. The spray will drift 300 to 400 feet and penetrate foliage.

I'd greatly appreciate any material you might know about in the way of lamp shade making—modernistic or otherwise. Whether the shade must be checked for safety, be fireproofed; whether the flowers in the new and modernistic shades have had preservative placed on them before they are placed in between the pieces of parchment or paper. I have seen ivy vines, field flowers, etc., treated in this manner, silhouetted by the light shining through the nearly transparent paper. Also, do you have any information as to where materials can be bought for the construction of shades such as those having holes punched in the edge through which cords or plastic are drawn or laced.
J. C.

"The Complete Book of Modern Crafts" by H. Atwood Reynolds (World Publishing Co.) has a chapter on lamp shade construction which will be helpful to you.

Because of the distance of the shade from the bulb, shades do not have to be fireproofed or checked for safety.

I have not been able to get any information on the method of decoration you mention. Can any of our readers give J. C. suggestions on this method?

I have not found a store which sells material with the holes already punched, but it would be comparatively simple to punch them yourself with a paper punch, using a heavy paper or parchment for the materials. Plastic lacings in many colors can be bought by the yard where craft materials are sold. Also, sometimes they can be found in departments where Boy Scout supplies are sold.

One further thought which may be helpful to you: There is a firm in New York City, The Homecraft Guild, 336 Central Park West, which sells lamp shades in boudoir, bridge, table and floor lamp sizes. They also can be helpful in providing you with patterns to fit each size and suggesting appropriate materials.

One on the Aisle—

Tingling Story Of Tenements

By Richard L. Coe

A FINE, TINGLING melodrama arrives this morning at Keith's, "The Window." This is a corking good picture, and when you see it, as you should, be certain to see it from the beginning.

The story is essential simple. A little boy, given to the habit of making up white lies to impress his playmates and his parents, chances to see a murder committed. No one believes his story except the guilty pair, who finally try to destroy this witness to their evil. Their efforts to do so, across tenement rooftops and into a deserted house, form the best screen chase in a long, long time.

What makes this picture so effective is a dogged insistence that this is a movie. While the dialogue is perfectly acceptable, it is told essentially in pictures; a Nigerian native could chill to its simple, pictorial style. For telling stories by pictures is the movies' fundamental art.

Taking the audience further into believing its story are the realistic settings. "The Window" was largely filmed in the tawdry tenements of New York; the small family—father, mother, son—is a poor one and their home's furnishings are sparse, not pretty. But withal, they have a dignity and mutual respect that are generally lacking when the movies look to the tenement world of warped human beings who become gangsters and molls.

So, despite their struggling existence, one goes along with this family, caring what happens to them, mindful of their distress in their little boy's thoughtless falsehoods, feeling compassion for the lad whose terror rises with the disbelief that greets his story.

"THE WINDOW," RKO release produced for Dore Schary by Frederic Ullman, jr. Screen play by Mel Dinelli from the story by Cornell Woolrich. Photographed by William Steiner. Music by Roy Webb. Directed by Ted Tetzloff. At Keith's.

WHERE TO BUY tickets for several local attractions seems to have our phone callers confused, though full details have been reported several times already . . . Here, again, then, is the three-sided dope: Olney Theater tickets (opening a two-week run of Tallulah in "Private Lives" May 31) are care of Olney Theater Box Office, Jordan's, 13th and G sts.; the Jordan's Box Office opens Monday morning . . . "Medea" seats (Judith Anderson plays one night only, May 18, at the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds) are at the Willard Hotel agency in the lobby . . . Catholic University's spring musical, "Thank You, Just Looking," is sold out for its two-week run in the University Theater on the campus; information about cancellations at MIchigan 6000, extension 358.

Straight Farce

College Park 'Shrew' High Grade Fun

The first word on the University of Maryland's program for "The Taming of the Shrew" gives the key to the performance: "Will."

Will is for William Shakespeare. The mushrooming speech and drama department of the College Park set is on informal, cheerful terms with the Bard these nights, through Saturday. They play the story of Katharine and Petruchio for straight farce and some of it is high-grade fun indeed.

Highpoint of the laughter, just as it must have been in Shakespeare's day, is Kate's fruitless honeymoon scene at Ptruchio's home. The actors play it winningly, and their cake is not dough. Kennard Calfee is an expertly roisterous Petruchio. He gives the part a mature, manly reading, speaking with convincing flourish and snapping his whip as though he were a Texan. It's a fine performance.

Kate is in the supple hands of Mary Agnew Howland, and she makes much of the wife's lovely speech about wives who should sue for peace. Hoffman is a likable Lecentio and Bernard Shur, Philip Rosenberg and Don Mortimer have other important roles.

Of the supporting players, though, Stella Gotoiu is outstanding. A decisive personality, that most illusive stage quality, is hers and so is an inimitable voice; she combines clear diction with the most offensive vocal timbre it's been my lot to ear. Miss Gotoiu is that rare thing, a natural comedienne, and though her scene as Curtis is brief, it's an outstanding event of the evening.

John M. Coppinger, of the speech and drama department, made the adaptation, cutting some of the detail which once may have delighted audiences and accenting, in his direction, the buffo.

The production is colorful, though the players have constantly to fight the black-draped background. Simplicity is fine, but, psychologically, black is not for farce.

Emily Post Tells Drivers How to Act

New York, May 10 (AP).—"A gentleman will no more cheat a red light or stop sign than he would cheat in a game of cards."

Emily Post speaking.

"A courteous lady will not 'scold' raucously with her automobile horn any more than she would act like a 'fishwife' at a party.

"Primitive, irresponsible, discourteous and impatient behavior behind the wheel of an automobile has no place in society.

"The well bred person will see courtesy and well-mannered human conduct in practically every traffic rule."

These are quotes from a traffic safety booklet, "Motor Manners," issued today by the National Highway Users Conference.

Mrs. Post, whose name has been synonymous with rules of etiquette for many years, wrote the pamphlet free of charge.

It is to be distributed free to individual motorists. The grateful Highway Users—an organization of groups such as truck drivers and the American Automobile Association—tendered Mrs. Post a luncheon at the Plaza Hotel this noon.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Umpire Rules Bill Was 'Safe' by 24 Feet

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell provides the second and concluding installment of the serial story begun here yesterday, titled: "Did The Defendant Disobey a Signal Device?"

The big question was whether or not the changing lights had given me a chance to stop before entering the intersection.

The policeman testified that he had remarked to me: "If you were 25 feet from the intersection, going at 25 miles per hour, you could have stopped."

"Wrong," ruled the judge. "At 25 miles per hour, you need 49 feet to stop. Not guilty."

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Our reporter for this one is Meredith Wilson of 1240 N. Quinn st., Arlington, Va., who writes:

"Most cops are efficient and courteous. But some are unnecessarily officious.

"It was the afternoon rush hour at Key Bridge, on the Georgetown side, and the policeman had taken over personal command, instead of the usual traffic lights. He was waving traffic left, onto Key Bridge.

"An out-of-State car in the right hand lane wanted to go straight ahead on M st., but was halted by the cop and ordered to turn left.

"The motorist pleadingly pointed to indicate that he wanted to go straight ahead, but the cop imperiously waved him on across the bridge to Virginia.

"I hope that the stranger didn't get lost over there in Virginia—and that he doesn't judge all District cops by that one."

SAME THING

Jerry Kluttz who conducts the Federal Diary column, will be on my radio program today (WTOP, 10 a. m.) to talk about job prospects in the Government.

"Are there going to be a lot of firings, Jerry?" I asked.

"Listen," replied Kluttz with a beautiful display of non sequitur, "that'll wait until we get on the air. Meantime let me tell you what my kids pulled this morning."

Well — when a proud papa launches into an anecdote, that's my cue to start jotting down notes. Here's the story:

"Aw, that thing won't hurt you," assured Gerald, displaying his 9-year-old wisdom. "That's a mama beetle."

Jackie went inside to find his mother. "There's a bug on the porch and Gerald says its a mama beetle. Is it? Huh? Is it?"

"I don't know," sighed Mrs. Kluttz. "I don't think I'm very familiar with mama beetles. Let's have a look at it."

So Jackie led her out to the porch—and pointed out Gerald's "mama beetle." It was a lady bug.

DERBY AFTERMATH

Elmer F. Andrews of the Hotel Martinique thanks me for my "tip" on the Derby.

He was pondering the advisability of backing Halt, until I remarked that it would be impractical to bet on a horse you couldn't holler for.

Incidentally, hippophiles throughout the Nation must have been puzzled by a discrepancy spotted by eagle-eyed Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va.

Herb noted that the official "chart" of the race listed Ponder as "Number 2." But the pictures showed that the first horse across the finish line bore Number 3.

I checked out-of-town newspapers, as well as our local contemporaries, and found that every one of them carried the same puzzler. The only explanation I can suggest is that the chartmaker slipped up.

SUN NEVER SETS ON PUNS

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris of Foundry Methodist Church is not a man usually given to levity.

But he scored a hit with his congregation last Sunday with a bit of punnery practice.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walter England, jr., of 1800 N. 16th st., Arlington, Va., had brought their son to church to be baptized.

All went in routine fashion until Dr. Harris intoned: "I baptize thee John Walter England the third."

There was a slight pause. Then a smile came over Dr. Harris' face, and he added: "It appears there will always be an England."

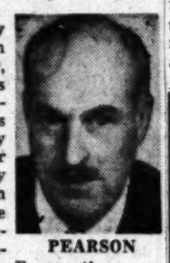
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Airlift Appreciated by Russians

By Drew Pearson

When the Berlin airlift is suspended the pilots and ground crewmen who performed the greatest air feat in history at long last will get a rest.



PEARSON

What they and the Nation may not know, however, is what intelligence reports from Russia say about their work. They say that the Berlin airlift has done more to increase American prestige in Europe than anything else.

Even behind the Iron Curtain, the facts of the Berlin airlift are known. The Russians couldn't keep the news out. The feeding of a city of 2,000,000 people by air, day in and day out, was too staggering a story to suppress. It was a great human story, spread not by newspapers, but by word of mouth.

The Soviet government not only couldn't suppress it, but was worried about it.

So the pilots and ground crewmen, when they ease up on their labors, may never really know how much they have done for their country.

J. Edgar Hoover School

During the 25 long years he has been director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover has received all kinds of tempting financial offers.

Various corporations have invited him to leave the Government and join them. Movie companies have asked him to serve as their crime-story adviser. Big detective agencies sought his services. But Hoover has said no.

When you compare this with the general field of former Government officials, Hoover's sacrifice looms much bigger than the public realizes. Most top Government officials serve a few years, then go out and make big money in private industry. In Washington and New York, the woods are full of lawyers who once worked for the Government and now lobby against the Government.

But Hoover was satisfied to work for years on less than $10,000; only recently got a salary increase to $14,000. He is truly devoted to public service.

Therefore, it was appropriate that yesterday—the 25th anniversary of Hoover's directorship of the FBI—a bipartisan group of Senators and Representatives introduced a bill establishing a model school for rejected boys outside Washington in honor of Hoover. For work among boys has been one of his greatest contributions.

Joint Enterprise

Already, a group of private citizens have secured a 530-acre farm near the upper Potomac in Maryland as a gift to the J. Edgar Hoover Foundation. They also plan to raise money privately to help build and finance the school.

The bill, introduced by Senators Thomas of Utah, Morse of Oregon and Ives of New York, and Representatives Walter of Pennsylvania and Case of New Jersey, provides that the Government will match private contributions, and that the school will be governed by a board composed of an equal number of Government officials and private citizens. This would give the school some of the freedom of enterprise which the Government itself lacks.

Hoover, himself, would be the guiding genius behind the school. And though his days of retirement are still some time off, the day might come when, instead of taking a tempting offer from private business, he could devote his talents to the thing he enjoys most—improving the youth of the Nation.

And in view of Hoover's long service at a modest Government salary, nobody in Congress is going to object to putting up part of the money for a boys' school dedicated to him.

Underneath His Bellow

Bellowing Bill Langer, the unruly Senator from North Dakota, likes to size up a man before voting to confirm him for office. That's why he blocked the confirmation of Adm. Paul Mather to succeed Jess Larson as War Assets Administrator.

Finally Larson called the Senator and asked what he had against Admiral Mather.

"I just want to look him in the eye," roared Langer.

Larson hurried Mather over to Capitol Hill for Langer's inspection. The big, friendly Senator threw an arm around the Admiral and said: "You look like a two-fisted guy. We'll confirm you this afternoon."

Acheson to Go to Germany

Secretary Acheson has decided to visit Germany while in Europe for the four-power Paris conference. In fact, Acheson already has a speech ready for his brief case, with the idea that he would go to either Stuttgart or Frankfurt as did Secretary Byrnes in 1946.

The purpose of the speech would be to assure Germans that the United States has no intention of turning them over to the Communists, even if we do reach an agreement with Russia.

Should the Paris conference end in failure, Acheson's speech would be doubly important, because he could then assure the Germans in person that the United States wants them to go ahead full speed with plans for a separate western German state.

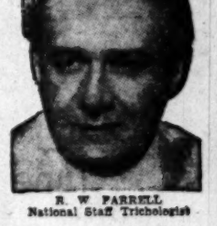
LOSING Your HAIR?
Enjoy MORE Virile Hair in 30 Days or We Pay the Entire Fee!



R. W. FARRELL
National Staff Trichologist

Give your scalp a chance to grow hair! Don't let simple deterrents like clogged follicles or sluggish circulation stifle your scalp's natural urge to grow strong, healthy hair! Our intensive trichological treatments scientifically combine ultraviolet therapy, professional stimulation and exclusive laboratory-created formulae; they penetrate clogged hair passages, attack subscalp bacteria, eliminate itchiness and irritation, normalize the blood circulation which "feeds" the hair roots, and revitalizes the entire cycle of hair-growing activity. Delay is deadly and may lead to fatal follicle shrinkage. Come in today or tonight for a free comprehensive examination and consultation. Hopeless cases are never accepted. Yes, enjoy your hair's new virile look within 30 days—or we'll pay your fee!
